RUM RUNNERS DESPERATE AS BLOCKADE CONTINUES

Ninety Per Cent of Craft Halted in Attempts to Land Liquor; Fog Hinders Federals

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, May 10.—Ninety per cent of the liquor traffic that formerly came into New York City through "rum row," the ocean refilling stations off New York Bay—has been stopped by the blockade instituted by the Federal government. But the remaining 10 per cent is finding a way to fool the Coast Guard and the fast boats at its command.

Every night rapid-power boats take the long chance of running the rum blockade and make good in the effort. The landing points are near Atlantic Highlands, in New Jersey, and along the shores of Long Island.

The score of boats that get by is said to be due to their superiority. There is nothing in the government fleet that can catch some of the liquor craft. Dispatches from Washington said today that the government intended to put into effect the same sort of patrol all around the Atlantic coast, and to continue its operations all summer.

RUM-RUNNER'S STORY

Graphic description of methods used to run the blockade and of the rendezvous into a cove on Delaware River, New Jersey, of the cases of House of Lords and other Scotch whisky distributed from the Bloch Brothers distillery in Glasgow was given by a rum-runner tonight.

The rum-runner, with three companions, went to sea on Thursday night in a forty-foot dory capable of forty knots an hour. Loaded with whisky at sundown the boat put directly out to sea, pursued by a Federal patrol boat. Speeding ahead in pursuer the rum-runner shut down, and lying to until the chaser went down, ran directly for Sandy Hook light and before daybreak put up, a well-protected cove on the river near Atlantic Highlands.

In the vicinity of the river, the observed rum-runner driven by high-powered motors was hailed by a revenue boat, but it passed them without a pause. Within three hours, the rum-runner was unloading the liquor was in upper New York cabarets.

COAST GUARD TONIGHT

The Coast Guard faced its first test tonight when an all-day gale loomed and the ships of the service moved in apparently in search for a rush of liquor to the city. Eight rum vessels were

GOVERNOR MAY HALT FORD SUIT

Executive of Mississippi Disclaims Responsibility for $12,000,000 Action

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

JACKSON (Miss.) May 10.—Disclaiming all responsibility for the antitrust suit filed by State Revenue Agent W. J. Miller in which the State seeks to impose $12,000,000 penalties against the Ford Motor Company, Gov. H. L. Whitfield tonight called upon Mr. Miller to bring about dismissal of the suit, out of regard to Mississippi's position in the eyes of the world.

The Governor's statement, after declaring that the revenue agent had not consulted with him before filing the suit, contends that "the filing of the suit is fraught with unfortunate consequences for Mississippi."

"I want the world to know that this suit does not reflect the attitude of the State of Mississippi toward legitimate business. I believe that it may even prove a good thing in disguise, for it should serve to make our people realize that Mississippi has come to the parting of the ways," the Governor said.

Adding that the Legislature will convene in regular session before the pending suit can be concluded, Gov. Whitfield declared:

"I shall send a special message to the members of the Legislature by mail within the next ten days emphasizing the importance of clarifying the State's attitude toward business enterprises."

RIFFS FACE REAL WAR

France May Use 100,000 Men

Ships Flying Tricolor Are Said to Have Carried Arms to Rebels

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PARIS, May 10. — Opinions expressed unofficially in War Office circles are that Marshal Lyautey, Governor-General of French Morocco, will need 100,000 men to suppress the rebellious move of Abd-el-Krim and complete the pacification of Morocco. It may require a campaign of several months to defeat the tribesmen.

Ten days have elapsed since Abd-el-Krim, as head of the tribesmen, invaded French territory in Morocco, and judging from the reinforcements which have been poured into the zone of action daily from France and Algeria, the effectives of Marshal Lyautey must be close to 10,000 men.

During these ten days, the French troops have been unable to expel the Riffians from French territory, and some of the French posts still are besieged. They are being reprovisioned by airplane.

It is expected another ten days will pass before the French counter-offensive develops. Military circles here aver that the officers leading the tribesmen in the field are maneuvering like veterans and that they evidently acquired their experience on the European battle fronts in the World War. A turning movement around the French right wing in the direction of El Bibane attempted by the Riffians, they say, bore the stamp of another similar movement during the 1914 campaign in France.

Gen. Neissel, inspector-general of aeronautics, arrived in Rabat today and immediately went into conference with Marshal Lyautey. Dispatches from Rabat say that reinforcements are arriving normally. The passage of these troops through the country of friendly tribesmen has had reassuring effects upon the population.

A pitched battle along a front of sixty miles will take place as soon as the French feel they have sufficiently strong reserves to continue the action until the tribesmen are driven into the mountains to the north.

A regiment of Senegalese and two batteries of seventy-fives left Toulon today. A transport also sailed from Cherbourg and another from Marseilles.

The Ministry of War is investigating reports that ships flying the French flag were engaged in transporting arms and ammunition to Abd-el-Krim as late as April 15, when the general public already was aware through newspaper reports that the tribesmen contemplated attacking the French.

RIFFS OPEN FIRE IN SPANISH MORROCCO

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

MELILLA (Spanish Morocco) May 10.—A movement of Riffian tribesmen in the Beni Said territory is causing some uneasiness among the military authorities. On Wednesday night numerous groups of rebels appeared in front of the Spanish advance positions southward of Rasafrau and opened fire upon all the Spanish camps. Natives say the rebels pierced the line between the posts, reached the vicinity of Afaraun and Sidi Mesa, and occupied the ravines which reach as far as Dar Quebdanti.

It is feared that some of the groups are hiding at a considerable distance in the rear of the forward line, while another concentration is understood to have taken place within rifle shot of Kadira, headquarters of the Spanish superintendent of the Beni Said tribe. Leading natives point out that this movement is intended to bring pressure to bear on the friendly tribesmen and cause them to rise against Spain.

The Riffian tribesmen have not waited until harvest time for their movement. It is said they hope by their desultory fire to bring the Spanish artillery and aerial forces over the territory occupied by native noncombatants, whose crops would be threatened with destruction by the Spanish fire and who consequently would be inclined to join the rebellion in vengeance against the Spaniards.

FRENCH STATUS IS PERILED BY UPRISING

RABAT (French Morocco) May 10.—Instead of local guerrilla operations to defend the Moroccans under French protection against the Riffian marauders from across the border, France is fighting a war upon which her destinies as a Mediterranean power depends.

Realizing the immense stakes and extent of the powerful outside factors which are ready to profit by her loss of prestige in Africa, France has given her military leaders a free rein, even to crossing the border into the Spanish zone, to vanquish the enemy and operations far beyond the scale of those originally intended are pending. Gen. Billotte, famous for his counter-guerrilla tactics in Morocco in 1913, is hurrying from Paris to assist the staff.

ORATORY PRIZE GIFT TO SCHOOL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Robert Sessions, Birmingham high-school student, who won first prize in the second National Oratorical Contest on the United States Constitution, today announced that he will donate the $2000 prize to the Phillips High School of Birmingham. The money, he stated, is to be invested and the proceeds used either to hire a noted lecturer to address students of that school each May 8 or to be used as an extra prize award annually in that school of which he is a student.

Young Sessions said that the keynote of his winning oration was sacrifice to uphold our institutions and that he felt he should practice it and could not take money for successfully arguing sacrifice. His father, who is a salaried man with several children and not well-to-do financially, said his son told him weeks ago, that if he won he would give the prize to his own school.

GREET HINDENBURG TODAY

Germans Crowd Berlin for Triumphal Entry of President-Elect; 10,000 Police Mobilized

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

(Copyright, 1925, by the New York Times.)

BERLIN, May 10.—Berlin is all agog in anticipation of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's triumphal entry tomorrow. It is estimated that nearly 250,000 members of various organizations—mostly Monarchistic in their sympathies—will gather to do him honor along the route from the Heer Strasse Railway Station to the Chancellory in Wilhelm Strasse. In addition to this formidable array there will also be immense crowds of Berliners and people from other parts of Germany, totaling probably 250,000, to cheer him as he passes.

Already many of those attracted to Berlin by tomorrow's celebration are here. The hotels are filling up rapidly. By this time tomorrow they will doubtless be crowded to capacity.

At the Heer Strasse station, Von Hindenburg will be formally welcomed to Berlin by Chancellor Luther, Defense Minister Gessler; Interior Minister Schiele; Gen. Von Seeckt, commander of the German army; Admiral Zenker, commanding the German navy; Mayor Boess of Berlin and others including Gen. Von Seeckt's and Admiral Zenker's staffs.

WILL GIVE BOUQUET

The Chancellor's little daughter, 10 years of age, will present Von Hindenburg on his arrival from Hanover with a bouquet of flowers. Von Hindenburg will then drive in an open automobile to the Chancellory. Ahead of his car will be a car occupied by Acting Police Chief Friedensburg and another police officer. In Hindenburg's car Chancellor Luther will be seated beside the President-elect.

In the third car will be Maj. Von Hindenburg, the field marshal's son and aide de camp, together with his wife and Col. Feldmann, Von Hindenburg's other aide. The fourth car will carry Minister of Interior Schiele and the Secretary of State, Kempner.

Policemen on motorcycles will ride alongside the four cars carrying Von Hindenburg and those accompanying him from Hanover and the government reception committee.

On the last lap of the route from Brandenburg Gate to the Chancellory, the President-elect will be escorted by a squad of mounted police.

Tomorrow evening Von Hindenburg will dine at the Chancellory with Chancellor Luther and a few others. He will probably go to bed early, as Tuesday, when he takes the oath of office at the Reichstag, will be an arduous day for him.

Reception preparations are still enlivened by strife between upholders of the black, red and gold Republican banner and the adherents of the old black, white and red, the colors of Imperial Germany.

Tomorrow's welcoming ceremony will be almost entirely in the hands of the latter. The Republican organization "reischsbanner" has not reconsidered its decision to remain away from the ceremony and other Republican organizations also will be conspicuous by their absence.

Tonight it was announced the police had forbidden Communists to conduct demonstrations which they had planned for tomorrow.

The police also issued an edict against any organization participating in tomorrow's Hindenburg welcome having a band of music. Any organization appearing or seeking to disobey this prohibition will be disbanded and refused permission to participate. Thus the plan announced by Hindenburgites of having bands play "Friedericus Rex" March, noted Monarchist favorite, when Hindenburg passes is nipped in the bud.

COMMUNIST PERIL

Despite the police prohibition against a Communistic demonstration the possibility still exists that the Communists may make trouble, especially when organizations welcoming the President-elect are marching to places where they propose to disband. Foreseeing the possibility of trouble at this time, the police are arranging that each organization shall have a police

KLAN PARSON BERATES FOES

Following Beating Anaheim Preacher Returns to Attack From Pulpit; Lights Political Bomb

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

ANAHEIM, May 10.—Nursing a black eye, the result of a fistic encounter Saturday, the Rev. Leon Myers, pastor of the First Christian Church and Exalted Clycops of the Ku Klux Klan, returned to attack his foes here last night, when, from the pulpit of his church, he verbally fed the fires of religious and political strife that have brought two factions of the town to the point of physical strife.

Smarting apparently from the beating given him Saturday by William Knott, retired merchant and anti-Klan factionist, the pastor delivered a hectic two-hour sermon to an overcrowded church.

LIGHTS POLITICAL BOMB

In delivering his sermon, hearers declared, he lit a political bomb that is expected to bring results of one kind or another, perhaps before morning. Reading from what he declared was an old copy of the Salamanca (N. Y.) Republican Press, dated several years ago, Rev. Myers cited the arrest in Salamanca of Charles P. Nichols, then Sheriff of Cattaraugus County, New York, for grand larceny charged with stealing $4000.

While the pastor made no reference to it, Charles P. Nichols is the name of Anaheim's present Chief of Police, placed in that position when the anti-Klan forces, victorious in election, ordered a reorganization of the police force.

Chief Nichols later admitted that he had been Sheriff of the New York county mentioned, but laughed about the grand larceny charges, saying that he would explain them all in good time.

As the Rev. Meyers talked, a congregation estimated at 3000 loudly applauded his sermon. At the same time, several hundred anti-Klan men gathered about the church, the largest in Anaheim. A dozen policemen watched for an outbreak. Pointed remarks and heated replies between the two factions ensued when the sermon was ended, and predictions were freely made that more developments in the tense situation might be expected at any moment. The inferred charges against Chief Nichols was an excited topic for conversation among every group.

ATTACK WIDESPREAD

Although the story from the New York paper was considered the feature of the pastor's sermon, he spent considerable time berating the converts of another religious creed, local politicians and criticised the Orange county District Attorney.

He added further spice to his remarks by telling his congregation that, when he returned home after delivering this morning's sermon, devoted to a purely religious topic, that he found on his doorstep a wreath made of weeds, from which was dangling a rope terminating in a miniature hangman's noose.

DEFENSE DAY PLANS TOLD

Annual Muster is Army Proposal

Beginning of Arrangements Awaits Only Upon White House

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—General Staff plans for making Defense Day a regular annual event to be held each year coincident with Armistice Day exercises, November 11, have been completed and await only White House approval to be put into effect. The project is expected to be presented to the President soon for final action, with urgent recommendations of the Reserve Officers' Association that it be approved.

Pending such approval, details of the staff plan are not available. It was formulated, however, after a careful study of reports from all corps area commanders and from National Guard and reserve officers all over the country, and is believed to follow closely the recommendations of the association of reserve officers.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

During the recent tour of active duty in Washington, attached to the general staff, of a group of reserve officers drawn from all nine corps areas, a committee was named to look into the Defense Day question and report both to the War Department and to the association. The committee report, which urged selection of Armistice Day as the proper occasion for the proposed annual "muster" for the purpose of "taking periodic stock of our national defense," was unanimously approved by the full group and also by the association, which has caused it to be widely distributed among its officer members.

The special committee was headed by Col. Harry C. Jones of Baltimore, commanding officers of the Three Hundred and Nineteenth Infantry, organized reserve, and included Col. Newbold Morris, New York City, Field Artillery Reserve; Lieut.-Col. Stanley J. Eaton, Sioux City, Iowa, Three Hundred and Fiftieth Infantry, and Lieut.-Col. Ralph M. Durkee, San Antonio, Tex., commanding the special troops, Ninetieth Division, Organized Reserve.

OBSERVED LAST YEAR

The first defense test last year was held September 12, commemorating the battle of St. Mihiel, by direction of Gen. Pershing. It was first suggested to conduct it the following day as a tribute to Gen. Pershing on his sixty-fourth birthday, when his active army service came to an end, but he preferred that the anniversary of the first American major offense operation of the World War be observed instead.

COAST LINE GETS LIGHT RAINFALL

Only Trace Recorded in Agricultural Valleys in Northern Interior

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10.—Rain, which began falling last night and continued intermittently until this afternoon, gave the northern Coast counties of California a good wetting. The rain, however, did not reach the great agricultural valleys of the interior of the State, where it probably would have done more damage than good, on account of the fruit and vegetable crops having advanced so far toward a harvesting stage.

At Red Bluff, in the northern end of the Sacramento Valley, there was hardly more than a measurable trace of rain, while on the Coast at Eureka the fall amounted to .36 of an inch. At Sacramento and Fresno there was barely a trace, but at San Luis Obispo there was more than a tenth of an inch of precipitation. Fair weather is forecast for tomorrow.

Eureka	.36	39.10	20.64
Red Bluff	.02	24.51	12.01
Sacramento	Trace	15.54	7.93
San Francisco	.22	26.96	11.62
San Jose	.18	12.45	6.50
Fresno	Trace	8.47	5.24
San Luis Obispo	.12	18.02	8.19

FEDERAL SHIP-SALE PLAN PROPOSED TO COOLIDGE

Owners' Association Recommends Disposal of Entire Fleet With Government Aid for Buyers

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, May 10.—Recommendations to make possible the sale of the government-owned fleet and its successful operation by American companies laid before President Coolidge by the American Steamship Owners' Association, the Ship Owners' Association of the Pacific and the Pacific American Steamship Company, were made public today and they urge the creation of two special agencies to determine the extent of service to be carried on and the amount of direct national aid through mail pay and other compensation. Included in these organizations are almost all the owners of ocean-going tonnage under the American flag.

The program favors also reduction of the Shipping Board from seven members to three and continuance in some form of the Fleet Corporation, under the control of Secretary of Commerce, or a Secretary of Marine, to supervise operation of the essential steamship services pending liquidation.

OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS

Other recommendations include: Extension of the coastwise laws to the Philippines, when the President deems it expedient; exemption of coast trade from Panama Canal tolls; freedom of ships to transfer to foreign registry except in national emergency; reduction in Panama Canal tolls; extension of the present construction loan fund, with the stipulation that vessels so benefitted must remain in foreign trade until loans are repaid.

The government is asked to relinquish to privately owned American ships the cargoes of supplies and troops in time of peace and to convey all government officials and employees and all government cargoes in such vessels.

The Secretary of Commerce, the Postmaster-General, the Secretary of the Navy, the Director of the Budget and one or two other American citizens experienced in shipping would constitute one of the agencies recommended. To the second of these agencies the chairman of the Shipping Board would be added.

These groups would determine the extent of the services to be carried on by passenger and by cargo ships, essential to national defense and promotion of foreign trade, and also the amount of direct national aid necessary to maintain the mail, passenger and cargo services of the merchant marine in overseas trade.

WOULD INSURE SALE

With these aids, the sale of fit government ships to private owners would be assured, the associations contend. They recommended that laid-up ships, for which the government has no present nor prospective use, be sold for scrapping and that the better vessels be preserved until they can be sold to American citizens.

All present Shipping Board services that are deemed essential, the associations insist, should be operated by American citizens, preferrably those who have the courage to invest in the shipping business and who are willing to buy the ships operated as soon as possible.

It is also proposed to amend the Seamen's Act to permit the master of a vessel to refuse to pay wages in a foreign port to any seaman who boarded the ship intoxicated or under the influence of narcotics or interfered with discipline.

LOS ANGELES HAS TROUBLE AS TRIP ENDS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LAKEHURST (N. J.) May 10.—Returning without accident from her longest cruise since she made the voyage from Germany, the navy dirigible, Los Angeles, was in difficulties this morning while her crew labored for three hours before she was successfully eased into her hangar.

The difficulty in bringing the ship to earth, according to her commander, Capt. George Steele, was caused by a shortage of ballast, much of which was discharged to offset increased absorbed weight when the vessel encountered a drenching rainstorm as she passed over the Florida keys.

While the fabric of the Los Angeles had dried out considerably before she reached Lakehurst, descent could not be effected by any maneuvers until 40,000 feet of expensive helium gas had been let loose from her bags. With this gas discharged, the ship was gradually lowered until the land crew could get in touch with her landing gears.

The Los Angeles, leaving Mayaguez at 1:30 Friday afternoon, was over Lakehurst thirty-seven hours and forty minutes later.

LOUISVILLE'S AUTO DEATH TOLL GAINS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) May 10.—Automobile fatalities in Louisville the first four months this year have increased 90 per cent over those of the corresponding four months of 1924, it was announced by Robert L. Schmitt, chairman of the statistical committee of the Louisville Safety Council. The total fatal automobile accidents in the city this year to April 30 was nineteen, while in the first four months last year there were but ten deaths. Eleven persons were killed and 113 injured in Louisville accidents in April. Four of the victims were in automobile mishaps.

EINSTEIN THEORY SCOUTED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10.—Capt. T. J. J. See, professor of mathematics in the United States Navy and government astronomer at Mare Island, announced before the California Academy of Science here today the findings of an exhaustive report which, in his opinion, reaffirms the geometry of Euclid and routs the Einstein theory of relativity. Capt. See told the academy:

"In submitting an exhaustive report against noneuclidian geometry and the theory of relativity to the six leading academies of science of Europe, I was careful to include the Berlin Academy of Sciences and the Royal Society of London, with which Einstein and Eddington are connected. These two venerable scientific societies have done great harm to the present age by diffusing a long series of errors which have misled many persons in all lands.

APOLOGY OWED

"Undoubtedly they owe the public some reparation for the mental damage they unfortunately have done. Will they have the moral courage to do their duty by standing openly on the side of truth? Or will they merely hope that the long-suffering public will leniently forget their errors and forgive their sins against the natural philosophy of the revered Sir Isaac Newton? Philosophers agree that the theory of universal gravitation, whatever the delinquencies of the academies of Europe, will continue to stand through the centuries.

"I make no prophecy as to the course of these societies, yet, as the Paris Academy of Sciences, October 24, 1921, officially proclaimed its adherence to the mechanics of Newton, it is to be presumed that the others now see that they should do likewise, and lament the folly they were led in-

Why does a king wear a crown?

In ancient days the winners in athletic games received a garland or wreath. Eventually this came to be made of gold, and, among the Romans, was bestowed for honorable service. The insignia finally evolved into the crown, and was appropriated by royalty to its own use as evidence of exalted worth.

While America bestows no crowns, it generously rewards leadership, knowing that back of leadership must be service and merit. World leadership for years has belonged to Times Want Ads.

DRIED-FRUIT EXPORTS GAIN

Last Year's Total Eclipses Previous Mark

European Prune Shortage is Outstanding Cause

Raisin Industry Advertising Shows Results

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, May 10. — The United States dried-fruit export trade in 1924 not only recovered from its 1923 slump, but broke all previous records when it attained shipment valuations of $20,164,000, as compared with $18,444,000 for the previous year, according to the foodstuffs division of the Department of Commerce. Exports in 1922 totaled $27,269,000.

Probably the outstanding causes of the remarkable increases in our exports of dried fruit during the past year are short European prune crops; better prospects for European stabilization, with its attendant heavy German buying, particularly of prunes; prevailing low prices in the principal prune markets; and the results of intensive advertising abroad by the American raisin industry.

SIXTH PLACE

A comparison based on value shows that out of nearly $1,000,000,000 worth of foodstuffs exported in 1924, dried fruits, as a class, stood in sixth place and comprised 3 per cent of the total. Out of the total dried fruits exported, prunes comprised 55 per cent, and prunes and raisins together 78 per cent.

For many years Germany has been the best market for American prunes and during 1924 exceeded its best prewar purchases by some 40,000,000 pounds. Even as far back as 1904, Germany took 28 per cent of our total exports of prunes. In 1913 that country's share of our total prune shipments abroad rose to 41 per cent.

The heavy demand from Germany for American prunes began during the closing months of 1923 and continued through 1924. A total of nearly 90,000,000 pounds of this fruit, valued at more than $4,000,000, was shipped to Germany from the United States during 1924—practically 40 per cent of the total shipped to all countries.

The United Kingdom this year—our second-best customer for dried fruits—was also second in the purchase of prunes. Purchases of this fruit were four times those of the prewar period and double those of 1923. The increase in exports to the Netherlands, our third customer, have been attributed, at least in part, to the demand created by the establishment in Rotterdam of packing-houses similar to those in Hamburg, France, normally a heavy consumer of prunes and invariably a large importer of American prunes in years of short crops, was traced in 1924 by one of its periodic shortages and bought heavily from the United States. Canada greatly increased purchases of American prunes, as did also the Scandinavian countries, Finland, Belgium, New Zealand, Mexico and Argentine.

Canada ranks among our best customers for dried fruits, and the large purchases of raisins make the Dominion our best market for that product—such imports in 1924 reaching approximately 45 per cent of the total shipments to all countries, and showing an increase of 22 per cent over shipments in 1923.

RAISIN EXPORTS

Although the United States exports of raisins to the United Kingdom, which is our second customer in this commodity, rose from 17,000,000 pounds in 1923 to 19,000,000 pounds in 1924, raisins have not yet recovered from their slump following the heavy shipments in 1922, when we held first place as a supplier of raisins in the British market. That year, it may be remembered, was the year of the Smyrna fire, when shipments of raisins to Great Britain fell off, with a consequent demand for the American product. During the following year, 1923, Smyrna was again in the market and led all other countries, but it is interesting to note that in 1924 Australia jumped to first place, displacing both Smyrna and the United States.

RUM SHIP GIVES NEW PROBLEM

Marine Surgeon Wonders How He Can Get His Fee from Liquor Ship

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The many questions which surgeons of the public health service must decide now include the problem of collecting hospital fees from a rum-running boat. A crippled seaman from one of these boats, was taken recently to the Vineyard Haven Hospital by a Coast Guard patrol. The American government gives free service in the marine hospital to all American seamen, but requires fees from foreigners, and the injured seaman was not American. So the surgeon-general said today he was puzzled as to how he could collect a fee from a ship that apparently has no intention of entering any American port.

LIQUOR RUNNERS ARE DESPERATE

sighted seven miles south of Sandy Hook by pilots who glimpsed them through a break in the gray curtain. Coast Guard officers at base No. 2, Stapleton, predicted that the bootleggers' chance for operations had arrived. Since last Tuesday when the Federal ships began to patrol fifty miles of line between the row and shore the weather day and night has been all against the liquor craft.

Rough seas by day which made it impossible for the speedy rum-runners to stand alongside schooners or steamers, and an ocean flooded with moonlight helped immensely the success of the blockade. But tonight, according to reports, the sea is calm, and the eyes of the patrolling fleet were blinded by the fog. No reports filtered through from the blockaders but the wireless carried out to them cautions to be doubly alert.

PILOTS REPORT SHIPS

"This is the kind of weather in which the rum-runners will take all kinds of chances," said Capt. John I. Bryan, in charge of the Staten Island base of the blockades, in admitting that the fleet would face tonight its most trying period of patrol. Capt. Bryan and other officers, however, were confident that the precautions of the Federal ships would be increased and that any vessel attempting to slip safely through the sheltering mist will find a patrol with guns ready for action, athwart in its path.

The arrival of the "mother" ships of the rum fleet was reported by Sandy Hook pilots who landed at Stapleton at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The pilots went out with ocean steamships forty-eight hours previous and when they went out no rum ships were sighted. Coming back, however, eight or ten vessels were observed hovering south of the Hook.

The pilots made out three steamships among the cluster of vessels. The remainder of the flotilla appeared to be composed of two master schooners, heavily rigged and of British registry.

KANSAS CITY, May 10.—Employment of Harlan Bartholomew of St. Louis as an expert city planner was decided on by the executive and finance committees of the Kansas City Public Improvement Association. Mr. Bartholomew will begin work at once on the preparation of a comprehensive traffic ways system which, it is hoped, will be completed by July 1. A bond issue to finance it then will be submitted to the voters.

PARLEY PARTY OFF TO BORDER

America-Mexico Delegates to Meet 15th Inst.

Anti-Smuggling Pact to be Discussed at El Paso

Steps to be Taken to Curb Increase in Rum-Running

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—An American delegation, headed by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the Treasury, left today for El Paso, Tex., where they will meet representatives of the Mexican government the 15th inst. in a conference on border questions. It is the hope of the administration here that treaties can be worked out for the co-operative handling of smuggling and other border problems.

The American delegation includes seven representatives of four government departments: Mr. Andrews, H. S. Creighton, in charge of customs at San Francisco, and Capt. L. G. Nutt, chief of the narcotic section, for the Treasury; William R. Vallance, assistant solicitor for the State Department; A. W. Henderson, special assistant to the Attorney-General, and H. R. Gamble, Assistant United States Attorney at El Paso, for the Department of Justice, and Assistant Secretary Henning for the Department of Labor.

Since the negotiation of border treaties with the Dominion government of Canada a year ago, government agencies here concerned with law enforcement on the borders have been working to establish a similar arrangement with Mexico. Mr. Andrews is optimistic as to the outlook, believing that the Mexican authorities are anxious to join hands with the United States in view of the fact that law enforcement will be made easier for each government if satisfactory treaties are agreed upon.

The smuggling problem on the Mexican border has been more serious in some respects than that which was taken care of in the Canadian treaties. One of the chief difficulties on the southern line has had to do with narcotics, with smuggling of aliens a close second, while on the northern border, liquor smuggling required the greatest attention. For this reason, customs officers and officials of the Labor Department and the narcotic division of Commissioner Haynes's prohibition forces will be more important factors in the forthcoming conference than in the meeting with the Canadian representatives.

Liquor running has been increasing lately along the Mexican border, however, and Mr. Andrews will seek closer co-operation among the various government agencies having to do with law enforcement there to cut down this traffic. He has had several conferences with other government departments on this phase of the work, but to date nothing tangible has developed.

Mr. Andrews said today he would press for understandings with Mexico looking to joint action by the two governments in suppressing all kinds of smuggling operations; exchange of information between the two nations with regard to international conspiracies, and extradition of persons violating the narcotic laws of either government. Questions of traffic in gold, arms and ammunition also will be taken up, but officials here were unwilling to discuss these features.

SCOUTS THEORY OF RELATIVITY

ture of surfaces in space with the curvature of space itself, which latter does not exist.

"The unauthorized extension of Causs's equation for the double curvature of surfaces in space to a manifold of space-time in four dimensions—a pure fiction.

"The doctrine of the radius of world curvature, which rests on the fallacy that because a circle on the surface of a sphere returns to itself, therefore space may return to itself."

GREAT WEAKNESS

But the greatest asserted weakness of relativity he called "the lack of an ethereal medium in space for conveying the forces which govern the orbital motions of the stars, planets, satellites and comets.

"Without vast tensions pulling toward the sun, the planets would fly the tangent, and the observed order of the solar system be destroyed in a very short time. The ether therefore exists and through the action of waves exerts forces pulling in straight lines for governing the motions of the heavenly bodies."

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) May 10.—Dragging of the Mississippi River bed in the hope of finding the bodies of twenty of the twenty-two victims of the sinking of the government steamboat M. E. The swiftness of the current near Columbia Landing, near which the boat went down Friday night while conveying a party of engineers here attending a convention, leads to fear that the bodies have been carried far down the stream.

PLAN MORE PAPER MONEY

Treasury Officials Intend to Set Record in Printing During Fiscal Year to Get Reserve Supply

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Treasury has made plans for printing more paper money in the next fiscal year than ever has been turned out by the American government in any other twelve months in history.

Orders have been prepared for the purchase of 200,000,000 sheets of distinctive silk fiber paper, from each sheet of which eight pieces of currency are to be made, and beginning July 1, next, the government Bureau of Engraving and Printing will be run at maximum capacity to meet the nation's paper-money requirements.

Never in any one year before had the orders for money paper exceeded 150,000,000 sheets. Coincident with announcement of the printing program, Assistant Secretary Dewey, made known that the Treasury would take its first step July 1 toward building up a reserve of currency. By this method it is hoped the life of the paper money may be prolonged. An opportunity will be had for curing the money before it goes into active service and this process is expected to keep it from fraying, cracking and otherwise going to pieces so easily.

The life of the one-dollar bill now is only about eight months, whereas Treasury experts figure it should be about a year. In prewar days the average dollar bill would wear about fourteen to fifteen months. Mr. Dewey is convinced that higher prices, use of automobiles, the necessity of commerce and industry and modern ideas and habits compel the carrying of more money. Thus, the silver dollar has fallen into disuse and the dollar bill and bills of larger denomination have come into greater use with the result that they wear out more quickly.

The Treasury has not been able since the World War to print money fast enough to permit establishment of a reserve. Mr. Dewey says the bills now are printed and placed in circulation within ten days, while tests have proved that they should not pass through the printing stages in less than a month and should be cured or seasoned two or three weeks longer. With the gigantic program out for the next fiscal year, it is his belief that current demands can be met and a return to the proper process of handling the bills may be accomplished.

Here and There With Joe Tanko and Floyd Hall

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SACRAMENTO, May 10.—The hunt for Joe Tanko and Floyd Hall, escaped San Quentin convicts, was resumed today when word was received that the fugitives had broken into a cabin at Iowa Hill, six miles from Colfax, and stole provisions and a rifle and ammunition.

Upon receipt of the information this morning, Sheriff Gum of Placer county sent a squad of deputies into that region and Chief of Police Barney McShane of this city, accompanied by several officers, also rushed to Iowa Hill.

To definitely show that the convicts had burglarized the cabin, Capt. Max P. Fisher of this city planned to compare the fingerprints at the cabin with those of the convicts on file in his office.

CONFESSES ATTEMPT TO KILL CALLES

Beauty Sought President's Death in Interest of the Church, She Says

BY JACK STARR-HUNT

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, May 10.—A confession that she had plotted to assassinate President Calles "to save the church" was made today by Senorita Maria Louisa Jauregui, 23 years of age, wealthy and beautiful, according to an announcement by investigating authorities. The President was to be slain tomorrow at 6 p.m. when he granted an audience to the young girl, which she had requested, it was said. The girl, arrested yesterday, was placed in an asylum today and it was eclared she is mentally deranged.

"It is but an ordinary incident in connection with my job," President Calles commented.

On December 1, 1924, when President Calles was ushered into office in the giant stadium here, Senorita Jauregui worked her way through the crowd and gave him a bouquet of flowers. She repeated the performance again on May Day when President Calles left the National Palace after reviewing the labor parade from its balcony.

As the President accepted the bouquet, she murmured, "May the Virgin of Guadalupe protect you." She again appeared at the stadium during the patriotic exercises on the 5th inst., in celebration of the Cinque de Mayo, Mexico's national holiday, and again presented her bouquet. As the President recognized her, she asked for an audience and was told to call Monday at 6 p.m.

Friday, Gen. Alvarez was informed by the physician what he suspected to be the real object of her visit, and she was brought before Gen. Alvarez and questioned. She then confessed. It was declared, that she had purchased a revolver for the purpose of taking the President's life.

"Why did you desire to kill the President?" asked Gen. Alvarez, according to the statement.

"Because Mexico is a Catholic country and as the government is against the Catholics, the persecution of the church cannot end until Don Plutarco is put out of the way," she is said to have replied.

Flyers Escape Death as Plane Dives Into River

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, May 10.—H. L. Doyle and William Cape, flying in a Curtis airplane from Binghampton, N. Y., to Mineola, had a miraculous escape from injury today whe their plane dived nose first into the Delaware River between Port Pervis and Matamoras.

The flyers had landed safely in Matamoras to refuel and had just taken the air again when engine trouble forced them to attempt a landing in a field. The tail of the plane struck the ground and this sent the machine into a curving arc, which landed it nose-first in four feet of water. Charles Curry, who was fishing near by and was wearing hip boots, waded out and carried the two flyers ashore.

KING BOWS TO FASCISTS

Emmanuel Will Declare Political Amnesty in Coalition Cabinet to be Formed

BY GEORGE SELDES

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

[Copyright, 1925, by the Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, May 10.—On the occasion of the silver jubilee of King Victor Emmanuel's reign in June, it is reported in well-informed circles, important changes in the government are planned. The King will issue a proclamation to the people, which will be followed by a general political amnesty, freeing thousands of political prisoners, Fascists and Communists. The King will declare the constitutional rights of the constitution have not been violated by the Fascist dictatorship, and Premier Mussolini is expected to follow this declaration by the organization of a Cabinet of all parties, thus ending the Fascist monopoly or dictatorship.

Well-informed circles point out that the present battle between Senator Albertini and Premier Mussolini really is the first move in paving the way to big political changes in Italy, including complete press liberty. Another significant fact pointed out is that Premier Mussolini is retaining five posts in the portfolio. His friends say this is not done because the Premier seeks a dictatorship, but because he is planning when the King issues his proclamation to fill the present unfilled Cabinet posts with nonpolitical, or even opposition leaders, thereby giving the first big coalition [illegible]. Leaders of the Aventine opposition, or group of [illegible] of Parliament who have been [illegible] since June, say they will return when the program [illegible] above comes to pass and [illegible] sentative government [illegible] lished.

RIFFIANS FACE MAJOR ATTACK

France and the colonies and heavy artillery, to outdistance the famous 75s, and airplanes are enroute from Cherbourg. No interesting operations are expected until the new contingents of artillery and airplanes are brought into action, which will be in about ten days.

The Riffians are considerably more powerful than was reported, numbering 50,000 instead of 20,000. They are well equipped with Spanish rifles, light artillery and even airplanes. The Riffians have special talent for mountain fighting, with courage in defense and ferocity in attack.

Spain, harassed by a renewal of the attacks in the Melilla zone, has agreed to ignore crossings of its border by the French on the latter's promise not to occupy the coast.

Politically, the Riff movement is dangerous both to France and Spain. Spain having abandoned three-fourths of its zone, even the small region fifteen miles back of Tetuan and Ceuta, the real key to Gibraltar, to the Riffians, foreign interference is invited.

Small boats passing near the coast from Ceuta to Tangier are shot at by the Anvjiras, a tribe similar to the Berbers. This region borders the international zone at Tangier and injury or maltreatment of British or Italian subjects would give these powers an excuse recognized by international law to interfere on behalf of their interests.

It may be recalled that this is how France came into Morocco and the British established their protectorate over Egypt. Modern war implements, according to naval experts, have reduced the strategic effectiveness of Gibraltar to a mere slogan. Ceuta, possessing an excellent harbor as well as natural fortifications protectible from the sea and land, is the natural key to the straits under modern conditions of war.

Besides ex-President Ebert, family-famous men have resided there or stayed under its roof as guests including Marshal Von Moltke of Franco-German War fame; Richard Wagner, Liszt and Helmolthe, the famous physicist.

MEXICAN UNIONS HIT REDS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

[Copyright, 1925, by Chicago Tribune]

MEXICO CITY, May 10.—The Mexican Federation of Labor has announced that it will fight without quarter Red propaganda in Mexico, wherever Reds are found attempting to enforce "direct action" or stir up the peasants against law and order, as voted in the Red convention here several days ago. It will use every possible effort and means to have radical Red foreigners expelled from Mexico under Article XXXIII as pernicious foreigners.

The Red labor organization in a convention here yesterday ran amuck, declaring open war on all other labor organizations and threatening the expulsion from the Red labor ranks of all heads of families or guardians permitting children to be baptized or having dealings with any church. It even took a slap at the Russian Minister, whom it accused of violating the Mexican sovereignty and attempting to impose on Mexican labor the domination of the Russian soviet and Communist regiment. This is significant, coming as it does from the Red organization, which was established and maintained in the past seven years by Russian Communist money and advised and led by Communist leaders.

With the Mexican federation after the Reds, the Communists disowning the former, and the Reds fighting both, labor promises to have a lively time.

TANAKA MAKES BID FOR POWER

New Star Arises in Japan's Political Sky

Former War Minister Seeks Party Preference

Anglo-American Opposition Probable Platform

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TOKIO, May 10.—A new star has suddenly drifted into the political firmament of Japan. This is Gen. Baron Giichi Tanaka, a former Minister of War and the inspiring influence of the ill-starred Japanese expedition to Siberia. Gen. Tanaka has assumed the leadership of the Seiyukai party and is said to be entertaining prime ministerial ambitions, which, in plainer words, means that the Kato Cabinet has found its position shakier than ever.

As soon as reports were circulated that Gen. Tanaka was a candidate for the presidency of the Seiyukai party, denials immediately were sent out. While these denials were being circulated Mr. Takahashi, whom Gen. Tanaka succeeds, resigned from the presidency of the Seiyukai.

INSIDE POLITICS

The immediate cause of Gen. Tanaka's accession to leadership is interesting, both because it is strange when viewed from the point of view of foreign politics and also because such is a perfectly ordinary means of putting Japanese political transactions through.

The Seiyukai party found its coffers rather low, so reports state. They told their president, then Mr. Takahashi, that money would have to be found, and that at least 700,000 yen was needed. Mr. Takahashi virtually replied that he did not know where to get this sum. Gen. Tanka volunteered to get the money. Result: Exit Takahashi; enter Gen. Baron Tanaka.

Statements are rife as to what Gen. Tanaka proposes to do now that he has stepped on to the first big stone leading across the river of political control.

HIS SPECIAL POLICY

He is said to have a special policy in regard to China and Russia. What the policy is no one yet knows except that it is going to be "positive."

One section of the Japanese press declares that this "positive" policy is to take the line of offering direct opposition to Anglo-Saxon economic penetration in these two lands, and they even go so far as to say that Gen. Tanaka will seek to line up the whole nation behind him when he sounds the trumpet call for Japanese versus Anglo-Saxon commercial superiority in China and Siberia.

These may be merely guesses thrown out from the other camp, but the press statements bear a strange resemblance to the policies which Gen. Tanaka, when in authority, adhered to.

ANNUAL INFANT TOLL IS 187,000

Death Rate High During First Month

Monday Greatest in June, Low in August

Boys Born Less Chance Than Girls, Study Shows

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, May 10. — Announcement was made today at the children's bureau of the Department of Labor of the results of the most comprehensive study ever made in this country on the infant mortality question. Studies were made by Dr. Robert Morse Woodbury of 21,960 infants in five cities. The cases were followed through the first year of life.

Final figures show that 187,000 babies under the age of one year die annually in the United States. Records covering in 98,000 cases during the first month after birth, a survey just completed included the cities of Baltimore, Md.; Manchester, N. H.; Fall River, Mass.; Akron, O.; Brockton, Mass.; Waterbury, Conn., and Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Woodbury's analysis of the factors in the infant mortality among the babies studied under the following facts:

Those peculiar to early infancy, such as prenatal and natal conditions, were first in importance and responsible for nearly one-fifth of the deaths under one year. Next in importance (those causes being given a rate of 33.4; respiratory diseases, 19.6; epidemic and communicable diseases, 7.1. The mortality decreased month by month during the first year of life, from 44.8 in the first month to 9.3 in the second month and to 4.5 in the twelfth.

Seasonal conditions influenced the mortality rates. August showed the maximum mortality from gastric and intestinal diseases. January showed the minimum. Mortality was lowest for infants born in August and highest for those born in June.

Mortality for male babies was about one-fourth higher than for females, a fact apparently explainable by a difference in vitality to the disadvantage of the male sex.

Factors relating to the physical condition of the mother also influenced the mortality rate. It was found, for instance, that infants of mothers who died within one year after confinement had a mortality from all causes over four times the rate for those whose mothers lived. A small group of babies whose mothers had tuberculosis had a very high mortality. High rates were also found among babies whose mothers had convulsions.

First-born children had a slightly higher mortality than second-born.

The age of the mother did not have any marked influence on the mortality rate, except in the case of first-born babies among whom higher rates prevailed when the mother was under 20 or over 40 years.

The mortality rate was higher for infants born within a short interval (within approximately one year) after preceding births and lowest when a four-year or longer interval occurred between births.

The mortality rate for premature infants was over six times as high as that for infants born at term.

Mortality from all causes was much higher among twins and triplets than among other babies.

Mortality among the exclusively artificially fed babies averaged between three and four times that among the exclusively breast fed.

Infant mortality rates classified according to the color and nationality of the mothers showed the lowest rates for Jewish babies and in ascending order, higher rates for native white, German, Italian, colored, Polish, French-Canadian and Portuguese. The range was from 53.5 to 200.3.

Housing congestion, employment of the mother away from home and low earnings on the part of the father were other very important factors influencing the infant death rate. Irrespective of all other factors, it was discovered that the infant death rate varied inversely with the earnings of the father.

EXPLORERS DELVE INTO GREEK TOMB

Vases, Jewels and Inlaid Dagger Are Discovered by Archaeologists

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PRINCETON (N. J.) May 10.—Important archaeological discoveries have just been made at the Heraeum in Argos, Greece, according to word received by Prof. Edward Capps of Princeton University. Prof. Capps is chairman of the managing committee of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, under whose auspices the excavations are made. Twelve chamber tombs of various periods have been found containing valuable material. None of these tombs had ever been plundered.

The Heraeum is situated on the top of a hill midway between Argos and Mycenae. It was a temple dedicated to Hera.

The tombs yielded many good vases of the late third Helladic period and also gems, beads and a fine bronze dagger inlaid with gold and having a design of flying birds.

Other tombs are not being excavated. One tomb of the second type of impressive dimensions has been found. It has a dromos twelve meters long and two meters wide, with the chambers roughly 5.6 by 4.8 meters. This and the remaining tombs are furnishing material for the archaeologists, who will probably complete their work in June.

DANGERS OF BOLSHEVISM RECOGNIZED

Shanghai Laborers Ask Sanction of Federation Against Communism

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SHANGHAI, May 10.—Realizing the inroads that Bolshevism is making among the working classes in Shanghai, a group of Chinese laborers has organized the Shanghai Laborers Anti-Communist Federation, having as its object "to oppose Communism, maintain public peace and livelihood for laborers."

A notification of the formation of the organization has been sent to the Shanghai City Magistrate, asking for his approval, without which no Chinese body is legal.

The federation is open to both men and women. Its aim will be to attack the trouble at its root and settle disputes between capitalists and workers so there will be no possibility of a breeding ground for the seeds of Bolshevism.

There are six separate departments of the organization, each run by a committee of six. One of these departments will devote its entire attention to the spreading of propaganda to check Communistic tendencies.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAWTELLE, May 10.—While pursuing a speeder on the Coast Highway near the mouth of Santa Monica Canyon today, Motorcycle Officer Harry Gregg, 34 years of age, was knocked from his machine by one of two automobiles between which he was attempting to ride. Gregg was taken to St. Catherine's Hospital, where it was found he had received severe, though not critical, head injuries. He was later removed to White Memorial Hospital in Los Angeles.

Three Killed in Plane Crash at Salt Lake City

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SALT LAKE CITY May 10. — A Claron Nelson, former superintendent of the western division of the air-mail service, piloting a commercial plane, and two passengers, Grant Christenson and Russell De Loge, both 15 years of age, were instantly killed at Woodward Flying Field here today when the plane went into a tail spin and fell from an altitude of 100 feet.

The plane burst into flames and the bodies were considerably charred, delaying identification of the two youths for several hours.

The plane had just taken off in the face of a strong west wind when it side-slipped and fell into a tail spin. Several persons who attempted to rescue the men from the burning plane suffered painful injuries.

WOMANLY WAYS BUSINESS ASSET

Gov. Ferguson Exhorts Sex on Demeanor

"Don't Ape Men," Feminine Executive's Advice

Urges Sisters to Improve on Masculine Methods

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HOUSTON (Tex.) May 10.—"There is no excuse for the woman in business unless she is going to stay a woman there. If she is going to ape men, let her stay at home and let the men keep right on as they have been going." This was the assertion of Miriam A. Ferguson, Governor of Texas, at a formal dinner given to the women delegates to the World Advertising Convention by the Women's Advertising Club of Houston, at the University Club here tonight.

Gov. Ferguson's address was a feature of the second day's program of the convention, which is the twenty-first annual, or "coming-of-age" convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

In view of this maturity of organized advertising, "Advertising as a Means to World Progress" has been chosen as the theme of the convention.

In her address, Gov. Ferguson said:

HER EXPERIENCE

"I know something of the struggles you have had and something of the obstacles you have overcome—struggles and obstacles the more difficult of conquering since you are a woman. I know from my own experience, for it is no easy thing to be a woman Governor, walking where men have walked alone, and sitting where men alone have sat.

"So it is as a coworker, a fellow-pioneer I come before you, to greet you, to congratulate you on your achievements, and to plan with you, if I may be permitted, greater things for the future.

"I think that women have a greater problem than men have. We are new to our work and we face the criticisms of those well-meaning masculine souls who gave us this new employment with just a little more than fear and trembling. They like us, do the men. They will all stand right up in meeting and declare that the world cannot get along without us—but they are still a little worried that in some of the new work we seem to be able to get along without them!

MEN SIDE ISSUE

"We really cannot blame the men; they have had their own way so long and we have cheered them so resoundingly that we have only ourselves to blame. And after all, they are a side issue in our future. They have given us our chance; now it is time for us to prove that all our talk about that chance was not just talk. We have a serious business before us.

"I believe that women may do great things for the business world. It is an old thing to talk of woman's intuition and her keen grasp on the little things of life. Yet wherever you find a successful woman, you find a woman who has taken her womanly ways along with her into her business world—a woman who has solved her problems with her heart as well as her head; a woman who has not allowed maudlin sentiment to overbalance her belief in kindliness and justice and fair play. If a woman is going to be mannish, let her stay away from me. God made us women and gave us rare opportunities as women; let the men profit by their own peculiar little mannerisms. We made our plea to get into the business world that we might better it. If we are going to do just as the men have done, we certainly cannot do better than they have done."

ORPHANAGE OF JEWS IS DEDICATED

Impressive services, participated in by leaders in Jewish welfare work in Southern California, marked the dedication yesterday of Vista Del Mar, $500,000 home for orphans of Hebraic parentage at Palms.

Services were in commemoration of the completion of twelve buildings which constitute the home, located on twenty-two acres formerly comprising the estate of the late Thomas Hughes, an early-day political leader of the city. One hundred orphans are now being housed in the home, each detachment in a building being presided over by a mother. The institution aims to give them the home life of which they have been robbed, in pleasant, congenial surroundings. Each of the structures is fireproof and completely equipped to care for children's needs.

Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin, S. G. Marshutz, George Mosbacher, president of the Federation of Jewish Welfare Organizations; Dr. B. Bogen, executive secretary of the organization, and Joseph Bonapart, superintendent of the home, delivered addresses at the exercises, which were attended by nearly 1000 persons.

BEACH CITY PHARMACY IS SCENE OF HOLD-UP

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, May 10.—Two bandits tonight forced G. H. Mercer, proprietor of a drug store at 857 Pine avenue, and two customers into a back room and robbed the cash register of $50. The robbers escaped in an automobile. Descriptions of the bandits fit those of a pair who committed three hold-ups of stores here within the past month.

KILLING STIRS BLASE VIENNA

Macedonian Patriot Slain by Beautiful Compatriot; Wife Wounded Trying to Shield Husband

BY KARL LAHM
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]
[Copyright, 1925, by Chicago Tribune]

VIENNA, May 10.—A proud fiery Macedonian beauty—tall, svelt, with jet black hair and black flashing eyes—a Macedonian patriot living in mortal terror of his life. Balkan plots of intrigue and revenge, love jealousy and a wife attempting with her body to shield bullets intended for her husband are the elements of the strange story they told in Vienna last night following the sensational murder in the Municipal Theater at a critical point of a performance of Peer Gynt.

The woman killer is Mancia Carniciu, 26 years of age, the daughter of one of the richest Macedonian families. The victim was Todor Dimitroff, Macedonian patriot and plotter with a string of aliases.

FICTION OUTRIVALED

The police, who are piercing together a story rivaling the wildest flights of imagination of a fiction writer, have discovered that Dimitroff, 50 years of age, has for years had a leading part in the Balkans' bloody politics and that he was responsible for the death seventeen years ago of two Macedonian leaders, Boris Saratoff and Ivan Garbanoff.

Dimitroff has been living in Vienna during the last few months in the apartment of a prominent Macedonian patriot, Philip Attanasoff, but the latter was recently driven from the city by the police. Recognized as the sworn enemy of Premier Zankoff of Bulgaria, Dimitroff was always in fear of his life and he rarely went out without his guard of four Macedonians who were armed to the teeth.

With the police questioning of Mlle. Carniciu and testimony of witnesses, the full details of the shooting are just coming to light.

The girl, defiant in the face of the murder charge, told how she had vowed two years ago to kill Dimitroff to revenge the killing of the two Macedonians.

MURDERESS TELLS STORY

Telling her story quietly and proudly, Mancia related how she contrived to get seats near those of Dimitroff and his party. Deliberately she told how she had visited the scene before the murder in order to perfect her arrangements.

"I knew that he was always expecting an attack and that he was ready to defend himself," Mlle. Carniciu told the police. 'So I schemed to sit back of him and when the right moment came, I fired."

With the first shot, Mme. Dimitroff, wife of the slain man, threw herself in front of the stream of bullets. She received a serious wound in the head and is in a critical condition. Bagatinoff, one of Dimitroff's guards, attempted to draw a pistol but a bullet from the girl's revolver felled him.

But despite Mancia's claim that she killed Dimitroff to avenge the two Macedonians, there are elements of mystery as to the real cause. Some of the girls intimate friends say she was madly in love with the man she killed.

NEW PARLEY ON DEBT RUMORED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—In the face of denials in official quarters both in Washington and Paris that there has been a renewal of formal correspondence between the two capitals on the question of debt settlement, the impression persisted here tonight that a resumption of the intermittent and informal conversations on the subject had been brought about.

Secretary Kellogg was still out of the city and in his absence State Department officials would not go beyond the flat denial made yesterday that any note with reference to debt settlement had been dispatched to Paris.

The denial still leaves open, however, the possibility that Ambassador Herrick may have received further instructions to press for the initiation of definite negotiations for a refunding agreement and that some form of suggestion as to the basis for such an agreement which might be satisfactory to the Washington government had been included.

In this regard, the rumor current yesterday that the Washington government was prepared to enter into debt settlement conversations with France in the light of whatever agreement Paris reaches with the London government for the refunding of the British war debt, was recalled, although it was still impossible to obtain either from State Department sources or from members of the debt-refunding commission who are in the city any statement whatever.

Intimations in Paris contained in press reports that the debt question will be given early consideration by the new French government were received with pleasure in official circles here, although government advices during the day did not touch upon that question. It was assumed that any decision reached by the French upon the debt matter would be reflected in the statement which, it is reported unofficially, from Paris, the new French Minister of Finance is to make this week in the Chamber of Deputies.

PARIS PROFESSES COMPLETE IGNORANCE

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PARIS, May 10.—The French Foreign Office this evening expressed complete ignorance regarding any debt note, which, it was reported from Washington, the American government had forwarded to Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador, for transmission to the French government.

Resumption of negotiations at Paris regarding a settlement of the French debt to the United States would cause no surprise. It is said this would be the logical outcome of the conversations M. Daeschner, the French Ambassador, has been having on the subject since he took up his post in Washington.

COMPANY DINNER STORY

As we were getting seated at the dinner table, three unexpected guests arrived. There were only enough fresh cookies on the plate for our family, so when I placed the three extra plates I hurriedly flew to the cellar for a peep into the cookie jar. There I found a handful which were more than a week old. I decided to put them on the table anyway and instructed the children to take these and leave the fresh cookies for the company.

As usual Betty was ready first and asked, "Mother, may I have a cookie with the white frosting on?"

"Aw," piped up Eddie. "Didn't you hear mother tell us that we had to eat the dried-up ones?"—[Mrs. B. A. in Capper's Weekly.

THE MARRIAGE PROBLEM

"When did you first become acquainted with your husband?"

"The first time I asked him for money after we were married."—[Berlin Schmutzige Wasche.

RADIO WORKS NEW WONDER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, May 10.—Radio history was written at Great Lakes Naval Station today when a message was flashed on a newly invented outfit from a Navy airplane flying over the lake to Prof. C. M. Jansky, in the Department of Electrical Engineering at the University of Minnesota, who replied to it.

Officers in charge of the experiment said its success marked a new page in radio history in that it is the first time such a message has been sent in an outfit which works without a generator and simply on dry batteries.

They pointed out that this is extremely important to the Army and Navy since with the old form of machine messages might be sent only while the plane was in the air and while its propeller furnished the power for a generator. The importance of the new outfit lies, they added, in the fact that an operator may now send messages when the ship is on the ground as in cases of forced landing or other mishap.

Immediately after the test, Lieutenant-Commander E. P. McDonald, Jr., who had a hand in perfecting and building the new instrument, announced that he will take such an outfit with him when he goes in June on the Polar expedition into the Arctic regions with Donald MacMillan, the famous explorer.

"The low wave length of thirty-seven meters will be extremely useful and attain great distance for us in the Arctic regions," Commander McDonald said. "We will go as far into the north as possible by boat and then rig up a plane and fly 750 miles further on. With this new outfit we can flash back messages constantly both while in the air and on the ground.

"In the event of a forced landing on our trip we will be able to send out a message to us."

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

After Sonia Lathrop, a beautiful girl registered at the Biltmore Hotel, has escaped from a swoon in Westlake Park to find herself handcuffed to a policeman who has been killed with a jade-handled dagger, she is rescued by a Chinese tong chief and imprisoned in a stone dungeon. An old Chinese woman and a young Chinese girl bring her food and the latter seems inclined to befriend her. The tong chief returns, demands a tong jewel of Sonia and when she denies knowledge of it takes her to a torture chamber where she is compelled to witness the weird rites performed by a red-headed executioner upon a Chinese prisoner. She is told to expect the same fate if she does not surrender the jewel.

"Pep" Kirby, Times reporter, meantime has located Sonia's rooms at the Biltmore, which have been ransacked. He goes to Chinatown and endeavors to arrange with Lee Yuan, aged Chinese sage, the dangerous privilege of sharing the girl's captivity. Meanwhile, Boston Blackie, adventurer de luxe, has reached Los Angeles with the girl missing from the Pullman. They are carrying the missing tong jewel and, after a phone conversation has directed police suspicion against Blackie, he proposes to surrender the jewel to secure Sonia's release. Blackie is deeply in love with his companion, who has come to Los Angeles to marry Robert Thornton, the man who first discovered Sonia Lathrop in the park. Only her engagement prevents the girl from welcoming Blackie's love. When the two look for the jewel, hidden in a vanity within a jess idol, it is gone. Blackie goes to Wong You, the ultra-Americanized Chinese to whom the jewel is to be delivered, and demands the surrender of Sonia in return for the jewel. Wong You, after an hour's absence, tells him the girl is the captive of a rival faction of his tong and he cannot release her. He then calmly informs Blackie that during his hour's absence he has captured the girl, Blackie ages and that she will be kept a prisoner until the jewel is returned.

Now go on with the story.

Chapter IX

"Pep" Kirby left the Times office building fondling the crisp bills which had been handed him by the cashier in return for his expense order. As he sauntered along Broadway, his oblivion to his surroundings might have caused him to be mistaken for a somnambulist. Twice he found it necessary to exhibit his police "buzzer" to pacify irate traffic officers past whom he was heedlessly jaywalking.

"If Sonia Lathrop has the jewel which Lee Yuan considers so precious to his Four Brother tong, she naturally would surrender it in exchange for her freedom. Therefore, I doubt whether she has it and, in consequence, I'll need something tonight to use as a substitute for a door key. Well, I hate flying but it can't be helped," he decided and immediately took a taxi to an aviation field and boarded a plane for San Diego.

On his arrival, Kirby went into the Chinese section and stepped beside the stand of a street vendor of candies—a white girl whose dull eyes and emaciated cheeks betrayed the drug vice which ruled her wastrel life. Her eager greeting, pitiful in its almost cringing fear of a rebuff, was a tribute of gratitude to a long-past kindness. "Pep" Kirby once had blithely neglected his room rent to pay a physician to relieve the girl's suffering when she lay in the city Jail raving in the throes of the morphine habit. From that day she and her Chinese husband, a penniless, drug-ridden mendicant, had been the reporter's devoted slaves.

"Take me to Sing, Goldy," "Pep" requested.

The girl summoned her half-caste child to watch her candy stand and led Kirby to a dark and grimy cell in the basement of a hovel. On a wooden pallet lay the living skeleton who was her husband. He welcomed his visitor with gratified surprise but also with a dignified courtesy, pathetically incongruous in the noisome cellar in which he lived.

"I come to you in haste, Sing, seeking knowledge and a great boon," "Pep" explained.

"Speak, for thy boon already is granted," the Chinese answered, his lifeless eyes brightening with pride which the woman's face instantly reflected.

"Aye, am I not named Sing?" exclaimed the beggar. "Therefore was I born a Four Brother. Know that long ages ago when the world was young, four wayfarers traveling from the four points of the compass met at nightfall on a desert waste. The first had tea but neither water, rice nor fire. The second had fire but neither water nor rice. The third had rice but no water. Then came the fourth carrying a gourd of water, his only possession. So, banding together, they joyfully supped and slept side by side in peace and comfort. At the rising of the sun, each made ready to go his separate way. But in the moment of parting they joined hands and swore a blood oath of eternal brotherhood, binding upon themselves and their sons' sons forever. The four were named, Sing, Lee, Wong and Fook and today, as in the beginning and in ages yet to come, all so named belong to the mighty Four Brother tong to which none but they may aspire. I am named Sing," the old man concluded proudly," and so my wee son, even as I, is a Four Brother."

"Will you give me a sign by which all of your tong may know I have been your friend?" asked "Pep."

"Assuredly! Did you not bestow the bounty of your kindness upon her who is my wife when the accursed white police jeered at her torture in the prison house? Wife, bring parchment and writing brush."

The girl hastened to obey. While she held him upright on his couch, for his strength was less than his child's, Sing carefully drew a single, shaded Chinese character in the center of a starred circle which was the same as Sonia had seen upon the tong chief's embroidered robe. When he had finished, he rolled the parchment and placed it in a hollow bamboo reed covered with a cap. As proudly as though he were bestowing a king's largess, he handed the reporter his gift.

"You have but to show this and all Four Brothers will serve you as their brother. Thus is fulfilled the solemn oath sworn when the world was young," the old man said, sinking back on his pallet.

The girl's wan face, as she guided "Pep" Kirby up the rotting stairway to the street, was radiant. She felt that the husband whom, in the deep recesses of her warped nature, she loved and revered, had paid a heavy debt with regal prodigality. Her self-respect, cringing under the odium heaped upon it by her own race, was restored and vindicated by the bamboo reed the Chinese beggar had been privileged to bestow.

That night with no preparation save the mendicant's reed for which he had made the flight to San Diego, "Pep" Kirby entered Lee Yuan's shop at "the fourth hour of darkness." The old man seemed ill at ease.

"A wise man may commit a folly; but only a fool persists in folly," he said almost ungraciously.

"Wherefore he who now seeks a lost girl is doubtless a fool," "Pep" answered. Lee Yuan drew hard upon his water pipe.

"So be it," he said when the exhaled smoke had vanished. "Let him who closes his eyes to wisdom, go at once, alone and unfollowed, to a spot beneath the tracks which cross above Los Angeles street at Sixth. An automobile will stop beside him. He is privileged to enter that car but not to speak to him who drives it. The car will go whither it has been commanded. On the way, a fool repenting of folly, has but to cry out to halt the car and depart unmolested. If, however, he remains lost in stubbornness his eyes will close in sleep. From that sleep he will awaken to look into the woman's face he seeks. Thereafter only the gods can foretell his fate. Go, my son, remembering thou are forewarned."

The old man rose abruptly as he finished speaking. Kirby thanked him for his "words of wisdom" and went out to stroll leisurely in the direction of the rendezvous. His one precaution was to stop at a cigar store and provide himself with a bountiful supply of cigarettes.

He had scarcely entered the shadow of the viaduct beneath the P. E. terminal when a closed car stopped at the curb beside him. "Pep" stepped into the car and immediately it started and turned north in the direction of Mission Road.

From beneath his half-closed eyelids he watched expectantly for something startling or bizarre to happen but nothing did. The car continued at easy speed. "Pep" idly noticed the dark bulk of the old Mayer-Shulberg studio; one by one, other familiar landmarks glided past. In the midst of his growing boredom, Kirby realized that his eyes were closed and he was inconceivably drowsy. He straightened up with a start and found it difficult to breathe. The air was heavy and seemed laden with a pungent scent that was stifling. From somewhere behind and above him there was a faint hissing sound as if the odor which oppressed him were being sprayed from an atomizer. He reeled against the cushions dizzily and instinctively reached for the door. He remembered that Lee Yuan had said to cry out if he wished to be freed. "No, no," he murmured drowsily and slipped gently into complete unconsciousness.

CHAPTER X

Wong You's bland assurance was replaced by a worried frown the instant Boston Blackie left him. Blackie had gone without a word of recrimination or a threat. Wong You understood that. To have done otherwise merely would have accentuated the completeness of his discomfiture. The Chinese knew and respected his opponent's shrewdness and daring. Of course, he would endeavor to reverse a first defeat, but it was not dread of that which caused the lines of anxiety on the cunning, unscrupulous face to deepen. What Wong You did fear was a jade-handled dagger beneath his shoulder blade and he feared it mightily. During his hour's absence from Blackie he had learned more than the hiding place of the girl he was now holding as a hostage. He had learned that a tong death sentence had been pronounced against him—a decree from which there was neither appeal nor escape.

Alone in a rear room in which he was safe from attack, he muttered a fierce imprecation. Twelve dangerous months of intrigue and conspiracy would culminate that night in a triumphant coup to be enacted over the solemn council table of the Four Brother Tong. Success even greater than he had dared anticipate, was within the grasp of his power-loving hand if he lived to make the revelation he intended at the council. To live seven short hours in, unmolested freedom was his only problem, but none realized better than Wong You the danger which lurked unseen but omnipresent in each moment of those seven hours, if he ventured beyond the threshold of his own door as his plans required.

The Chinese conspirator, clever and shrewd and resolute as any who ever sought to overthrow the French throne in the hey-day of the Valois, concentrated every atom of his cunning upon the crisis on which life and death hung, gently oscillating on evenly balanced scales.

"Boldness armors him who dares use it," Wong cried at the end of an hour of thought. Immediately he summoned a trusted lieutenant and sent him in haste to the tong chief of the Four Brothers. In the inner citadel of the tong master, who that day had decreed Wong You's death for treason, the emissary delivered this message:

"Wong You salutes his master and humbly offers him a prisoner through whom, by means to be revealed at the council table, the stolen jewel missing from the Exalted Master's diadem assuredly will be recovered. The prisoner, a white girl, is the one the chief tong has been seeking. Wong You begs the privilege of serving his master by immediately delivering the girl into his custody."

The old man listened in silence as the proposal was repeated to him by the master in the privacy of the latter's sanctum.

"The fox feels the jaws of the trap," he said after proper thought. "Wong You wisely fears the thrust of a jade dagger before the council and seeks by craft to buy a few hours of life. So be it, master. Accept his prisoner with due thanks and assurances of your eagerness to learn the means by which his zeal in your behalf shall restore the sacred emblem. If he comes to the council, command that he shall die on the threshold of the chamber as he departs. If he fails to come, let him then die as already planned. He cannot escape. The traitor obtains but seven hours of life for the girl who decaped us on the train. The bargain is a good one. Accept."

Thus it happened that the protesting, frightened girl who had been tricked from the safety of Boston Blackie's apartment, was led from her first prison through underground passages which, at last, ended at the stone door of the cell where Sonia Lathrop was confined. The door opened; the newcomer was thrust within.

"Sonia!" she cried as she saw the prisoner crouching in terror great as her own, against the cell wall. The two girls rushed, sobbing, into each other's arms. Behind them the heavy door closed noiselessly.

This great mystery story reaches a climax of human drama in the next installment in tomorrow's Times. The tong conspiracy in which two white girls are the pawns and Kirby among the pros, moves swiftly and inevitably toward a conclusion as dramatic as it is unexpected. You must not miss it.

Shake-up in Rail Ownership Held Western Need

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, May 10.—A radical change is needed in the ownership and directorship of the western railroads, according to F. J. Lisman of New York, investment and transportation expert, who is in Chicago after a survey of the northwest field.

Ninety per cent of the stock of western roads is owned in the East, he points out, and the active directors live mostly in the East.

"They are out of touch with changing conditions in the territory adjacent to their railroads," he says, "and visualize these changes a year or two later only when they are reflected in the declining earnings of their companies which would show in the monthly or annual reports.

"This is a vicious circle which must be broken by a closer touch of the stockholders and directors with the needs of their respective properties."

MAUI WELCOMES GREAT ARMADA

Fleet Rides at Anchor in Lahaina Roads

Two Days of Complicated Tactics Staged

Huge Ships Evade Attack by Destroyers

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

WITH UNITED STATES FLEET AT ANCHORAGE OFF LAHAINA ISLAND OF MAUI, May 10.—The Grand Fleet swung to and fro in the open roads of Lahaina today after completing two days of complicated maneuvers with the largest naval concentration assembled since the war. Arriving yesterday afternoon, the various ships dropped anchor at the designated positions and received a welcome from the residents of Maui.

During the stay here it is expected that the personnel will receive valuable training aboard ship owing to the small size of Lahaina. It is possible to grant liberty to only 2400 of the 40,000 enlisted men daily, the balance of the crews remaining aboard to do minor repairing and overhauling necessitated by the "battle" of Oahu and the present maneuvers.

The main body of the fleet managed to evade searching destroyer squadrons during a four-hour torpedo defense drill Friday night. An extremely dark night and heavy clouds blanketing the moon enabled the fleet to remain hidden from the attacking destroyers. Radio silence and darkened ship prevailed as usual during the drill.

Yesterday morning the entire fleet of approximately 150 vessels performed a complete maneuver known as "inverting fleet." This maneuver completely reversed the order of the component units so that the train which had been in the rear of the procession guarded by the rear guard, was in the van of the fleet and the scouting force which had been ahead, was hovering far in the rear.

Shortly before reaching Maui the aircraft tender Langley successfully launched several planes from her deck which flew over the fleet as it approached anchorage.

HONOR DEAD ON MOTHER'S DAY

Hosts Assemble at Tomb of Unknown Soldier

Delegates at Convention of Women Attend

Planes Drop Carnations on World War Graves

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Members of the Diplomatic Corps and foreign delegates and guests attending the seventh quinquennial convention of the International Council of Women joined the hosts of Americans who went out to Arlington today to honor our dead in the Mothers' Day ceremonies at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The service was arranged by the American War Mothers, headed by Mrs. H. M. McClure of Kansas City, Mo., who presided.

Fearing to give offense to some American or Allied mother, the German delegates to the convention did not attend the service at Arlington, but did attend the services conducted in the churches this morning to pray, they said, "that never again may such trouble come upon the world and the hearts of the mothers be broken as they were during those terrible years."

With Maj.-Gen. George Barnett, U.S.M.C., acting as temporary chairman, Col. Dwight F. Davis, acting Secretary of War, delivering the principal address, the Army, Navy and Marine bands in attendance, and Mme. Schumann-Heink as soloist, the ceremonies were not only the tribute of the mothers of the country, but the tribute of the nation to its mothers and its sons.

"On this day all over this great country our soldiers are paying tribute to the mothers of America," said Col. Davis. "In every American post special ceremonies are being conducted at which the mothers of soldiers are the honored guests. No more appropriate or significant day could have been chosen by the War Mothers for this particular pilgrimage to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

ALTAR OF PATRIOTISM

"This is not the tomb, but the altar of patriotism. Our heads are bowed, not in sorrow but in reverence. We come not as mourners but as disciples. The unknown who lives here is the spirit of America. He left behind no creed, no message, not even a single word. He is our inspiration, not by his words, but by his deeds.

"In this he may well be an example to us all. You mothers sent your sons to war with smiling lips but aching hearts, proud of their courage, patriotism and loyalty. You gold-star mothers do not talk about your loss; your sorrow is deep in your hearts, mingled with a great and abounding pride in the everlasting glory which belongs to your boy. Your sons did not talk about fighting for civilization and humanity—they did it. They and their unknown comrade were not slackers, nor were you. America can always count on the mothers of America."

Speaking for the International Council of Women, Lady Aberdeen expressed the thanks of the delegates for "being permitted to join in this beautiful service in these beautiful surroundings, which we shall never forget."

WREATHS ON TOMB

At the conclusion of the service in the amphitheater, wreaths were placed on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier by Acting Secretary of War Davis for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps; by Mme. Schumann-Heink, whose sons are among the unknown dead, for the American War Mothers; by Lady Aberdeen, and Mrs. Philip North Moore for the delegates to the convention and by representatives of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion Auxiliary and the Disabled American Veterans of the World War and at the last by delegates of the foreign nations represented at the convention led by the councils of Great Britain and France.

While the service was in progress airplanes were flying low overhead dropping carnations on the graves of the World War dead on the hillside near the amphitheater.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Daeschner, Henry Getty Chilton, counselor of the British Embassy, the Greek Minister and Mme. Simopoulos and other members of the Diplomatic Corps occupied boxes with the delegates of their respective countries and after the service took part in the ceremonies at the tomb.

DAUGHTERS SEEK TO BREAK FATHER'S WILL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—Declaring that John A. Bailey, 88 years of age who died last June, leaving $5000 to the Assembly of God, a church, was "easily influenced in his disposition of money and property by appeals to his generosity and religious emotions," his two daughters, Mrs. Lee Ashworth and Mrs. Charles Hinterleiter, brought suit in Circuit Court to set aside his will. In addition to the bequest to the church he willed $5000 to Mrs. Nellie Haeckel, in consideration for her nursing and a similar amount to Mrs. Annie Petro for her care of him. The remainder of his $38,000 estate was willed to the daughters.

NATIONAL PARK QUIZ WELCOMED

Chief Gratified at Proposed Investigation

Denies System in Hands of Concessionaires

Figures Showing Increase in Visitors Cited

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, May 10. — Stephen T. Mather, director of the National Park Service, expressed gratification over the proposed investigation by the Senate Public Lands Committee of the entire administration in the national park system.

"For some time," he said, "there have been circulated rumors and reports to the effect that the national parks are in the hands of concessionaires and are not being operated for the benefit of the public. An investigation of the entire matter by the Senate Public Lands Committee is exactly what has been wanted for a long time, and is certain to clear up such rumors which, if go unchallenged, may result in seriously retarding western travel.

VISITORS INCREASING

"Never before in the history of the national park system were the national parks more popular with the American people. Ten years ago the visitors numbered less than 250,000. The 1924 season saw over 1,600,000 visitors, of which approximately 70 per cent toured the parks in their private automobiles and availed themselves of the free public camp grounds developed at large expense by the government. Only about 30 per cent of the total number of visitors to the national parks coming by train used the transportation systems and stopped at the hotels and other facilities operated by the concessionaires under contracts with the Interior Department.

"Talk of excessive fees being charged by the private operators in the parks is disproved by the fact that so great is the demand for accommodations in most of them that the department has required the operators to greatly expand their facilities each year. All classes of visitors are welcome to the parks. For those who demand hotel accommodations and rooms with bath these are available; and for those who want to live more cheaply, the prices charged at the permanent camps are within the reach of the ordinary man's pocketbook. Visitors bringing their own camping equipment are taken care of in the public automobile camps, no charge being made to them.

EXPLAINS AUTO FEES

"While automobile fees are charged in the majority of the parks, for the use of the park roads, the purpose of the fee is sometimes misunderstood because the average citizen is not familiar with the financial policy of Congress. Congress, while always willing to appropriate funds for the maintenance, protection and improvement of the parks, asks that those who use and enjoy them shall contribute toward their administration and upkeep. The public utilities of the parks are required to pay to the government taxes on their franchises; these charges being based on the volume of business transacted by these enterprises. All revenue derived by the collection of fees and franchise charges is paid into the United States Treasury and an account rendered to Congress.

"A thorough inquiry by a responsible legislative body with hearings open to the public is certain to attract wide attention. Too little is known of the magnificent park system maintained by the government and of the unlimited opportunities it affords for outdoor recreation at a minimum outlay of expense such as can be obtained at no other place in the world."

He Minds His Own Business; Safe is Robbed

Either the police are slandering Louis Portugal, a baker, or Portugal believes in doing what he is told.

Portugal works next door to the Stillwell Cafe, 215 South Spring street. At 3 a.m., according to the tale the police relate of him, he saw a man fooling around the rear door of the cafe and asked him what he was doing.

"None of your business," it is said the man replied, "you run along and tend to your baking."

Portugal did and said nothing to anybody even when he saw, a few minutes later, that the door had been taken from its hinges and that someone was bending over the safe inside, it is declared. Later he modified his noninterference policy sufficiently to call the police, but by that time the intruder has disappeared, taking with him the safe's contents, $250.82.

The job was done with a sledge, a crowbar and an ax, which were left behind. The sledge bore a label which marked it as the property of the city of Los Angeles.

HUSBAND TOOK CANDY AWAY, WIFE ASSERTS

Her husband took away her candy and threw her ice cream in the sink, complained Mrs. Effie Marie Creswell in a suit for divorce from Reginald Alvin Creswell, on file in the office of the County Clerk. "I'm boss of this house," he declared to Mrs. Creswell. They were married in August, 1920, and parted last May, the complaint recited.

MEAN TRICK CITED IN DIVORCE COMPLAINT

Mrs. Blanche Brooks thought it was a mean trick that her husband played on her, according to her complaint for divorce from Fred J. Brooks. He got her doctor to give him a prescription for a bottle of whisky, to improve her health, and then went out and drank the liquor with Alice Moore, she declared. Her complaint was prepared by Attorney Perry Backus.

ROYAL FAMILY FACES INQUEST

Sensations Are Promised in Lascelles Inquiry

Found Dead With Shotgun on Table Before Him

Second Violent Death in Two Years Near Crown

BY JOHN STEELE

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

Copyright, 1925, by the Chicago Tribune.

LONDON, May 10.—An official inquest over the body of the Hon. Francis John Lascelles—uncle of Viscount Lascelles and Princess Mary—will take place tomorrow morning. The dead man was found Saturday in the library of his house at Remsey, killed by a shotgun, which was propped up between the boards of an extension table. A number of sensational facts concerning the life of the man, closely connected with British royalty, were revealed today.

This is the second time within two years that such a mysterious death and circumstances has cropped up uncomfortably near the royal family. On July 16, 1923, Angus Patrick Bowes-Lyon, first cousin of the Duchess of York, was found shot dead in a limousine near Ripley. Disappointment over a broken love affair was given out as the cause of that tragedy. The verdict was suicide while unsound in mind.

The case of the shooting of Mr. Lascelles yesterday offers no such solution. Fifty-four years old, married, the father of a 19-year-old daughter, Francis John Lascelles, half-brother of the Earl of Harewood, was a man who lived like a hermit. His neighbors in the little village of Remsey say he was almost never seen, while it was known that he was suffering from some form of illness of which he never complained and never talked about.

A servant girl who worked in his house declared that all the time she was employed there she never knew him to go out of doors. Though he and his family had been living in town eight years, he was practically a total stranger and few could recognize him if they met him on the street.

The recluse life he led in Remsey naturally created an atmosphere of mystery.

Neither his wife nor daughter were in the house when the shooting happened. Another curious fact was that none of the servants heard the shot, despite the fact that they were in the house and both barrels of the double-barrel hunting gun went off. The maid today declared her dead master had not slept in his bed on the night of the killing. She found the bedclothes undisturbed when she went into his room in the morning.

The Lascelles family with the exception of the husband of Princess Mary, is far from wealthy. Viscount Lascelles a few years before his royal marriage fell heir to nearly $10,000,000 by the will of Lord Clanricardo—his aged uncle. The dead Mr. Lascelles, it is rumored, was for a long time a sufferer from mental disorders, possibly resulting from an automobile accident some years ago. It is reported that he spent some time in a private sanatorium.

NEW SCION OF COOGANS GOES EAST

Takes Mother and Aunt Along to Point Out Sights in Crossing Continent

The comforts of the modern de luxe drawing-room on the California Limited were enhanced for "Bobby" by the addition of a traveling bassinet. It is a wicker affair and fits snugly into a Pullman seat.

Accompanying Master Coogan on his initial venture eastward were his mother, Mrs. Jack Coogan, and his aunt, Mrs. George Coogan. They are going to join Jackie and his father in New York, and en route home will stop in Syracuse so that Jackie's paternal grandparents will get their first glimpse of their new grandson. Mrs. Coogan will also attend to some details of Jackie's new contract recently completed between Metro-Goldwyn and the Jackie Coogan productions of which she is secretary.

She was riding in an automobile at high speed near Sawtelle in the course of making "Thundering Speed," for a California studio production, when the car crashed into a store after failing to make a curve in the highway.

Each city champion is given a free trip to Atlantic City. His expenses at one of the best hotels there are paid for a week, as well as those of a chaperon. In addition to this, the boys are entertained by managers of various theaters and other amusement places, are received by the Mayor of the city, and are treated generally as royal visitors. It is a great event in their lives, and gives them something to tell the "fellas" for many months.

When asked if in their zeal to win the boys ever made any attempt to cheat a bit, the director of one of the largest playgrounds in Washington said, "Oh, no. Boys nearly always play fair. It is only girls who cheat." And this director is a woman, and therefore cannot be charged with biased judgment. There must, therefore, be something in what she says, but it is hard on the girls.

series. 'Tis no small thing to be marble champion of the United States. The champion for 1924 has even become one of the large army of radio speakers.

One difference between the new game of "ringer" and the old-fashioned game of "marbles" is that all tournament play is for "fair," which means playing for sportsmanship only and the marbles must be returned to their owners at the end of the game. This may seem hard to the winner, but is a great boon to the loser. He may not win a trip, but at least he need not worry that he will lose his highly prized nib or hoodle.

At all these tournament games there is a referee, and if available, a scorer. "The referee shall have complete charge of the play. He shall interpret these rules and have power to make decisions on any points not specifically covered. He shall have authority to disqualify players for unsportsmanlike conduct. He shall have authority to order from the playing field, or its vicinity, the coach or other representative of any player, who conducts himself improperly." If there is no scorer, the referee must also keep the score.

There are specific rules for the size of the playing ring, the size and the material of the marbles. The playing marbles must be approximately one-half inch in diameter and be made of clay, while the shooters may be made of any substance, with the exception of steel or other metal, and they must be "not less than one-half inch nor more than five-eighths inches in diameter by exact measurement."

The method of conducting these tournaments is as follows: All boys who wish to enter are played off in groups of six, usually on their neighborhood playground. By this process of elimination the champion of that particular playground is determined. After all the playgrounds in a city have declared their champions, these boys are matched, and the winner declared the champion of the city.

The city champion is then sent to Atlantic City and matched with the champions of all the other represented cities, and the national champion is determined. And he then becomes the envy and hero of all the other marble shooters in the country.

LONG JOURNEY FUTILE

Polish Girl Crosses Half Hemisphere to Reach Jail as Illegal Immigrant

DETROIT, May 10.—Vaderie Godowicy, 18-year-old Polish peasant girl with two long braids of yellow hair, crossed half the world only to be imprisoned in the women's division at police headquarters.

Leaving a harsh father and an indifferent stepmother she crossed the Atlantic to meet a brother in Ottawa, and later a young man in Chicago, who was waiting to marry her. The patrol guard arrested her as she and 17-year-old Edward William Allen of Windsor stepped from a rowboat at the foot of McKinstry avenue. Her brother had sent her to Windsor, where a friend hired Allen to take her across the Detroit River.

The Polish immigration quota is exhausted and it was necessary for her to enter the United States illegally to keep her tryst with her fiance. Immigration authorities have charged her with violating the immigration law. Allen is awaiting trial in the County Jail.

Employees of the women's division are friendly to her. But she has learned only one word of English. It is, "thanks." And no one has gone to see her. She has not even seen the man she expected to marry. She has not heard from her brother.

All she can do is wonder if she is going to be sent back to the farm near Warsaw. To the only other Polish woman prisoner she says she hopes not.

YOUNG GIRL REPORTED KIDNAPED AT SCHOOL

MOTHER MISSING BUT TOT'S ABDUCTOR IS SAID TO BE UNLIKE HER

Police are searching for Beatrice Crockford, 5 years of age, reported to have been kidnaped from the public school at San Pedro and Twenty-eighth streets Wednesday morning. A woman dressed in dark clothing, according to the child's schoolmates, called her from school just before the session began.

James Crockford, 2703 South San Pedro street, father of the child, said his wife disappeared in April, but that the woman who took the child did not answer the wife's description.

Since the wife disappeared a son, Garnet Crockford, 11 years of age, has been cared for at Juvenile Hall.

Legion Essay Prize Winner is Californian

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

INDIANAPOLIS, May 10.—"Communism destroys personal liberty, breeds class hatred and paves the way for tyranny. It is directly opposed to the fundamentals of American government and is a menace to Americanism."

That is the argument advanced by Miss Grace Nichols, 18 years of age, of Healdsburg, Cal., winner of the third national cash prize in the annual essay contest conducted by the National Americanism Commission of the American Legion. Some 200,000 essays were submitted by school-children under 18 in all parts of the country.

First prize was won by Robert E. Krumholtz, 17, of Springfield, O., and the second prize went to John S. Miller, Jr., 17, of Portsmouth, Va. The money is to be devoted, according to Director Garland W. Powell of the National Americanism Commission, to the higher education of the prize winners.

Husband Asking Divorce Admits He Vexed Wife

Hugo L. Soll didn't know why it was but he admitted, in his suit for divorce, that he grated harshly on the nerves of his wife, Francesca L. Soll. His most innocuous actions, he declared, wrought turmoil in the household.

For instance, shaving. He could see no harm in a daily shave. But Mrs. Soll, according to his complaint, was so annoyed by his methodical, morning habit of mowing his whiskers that she threatened to end it all by turning on the gas, he said.

BULB EMBARGO IS ONLY PARTIAL

Restrictions Placed to Keep Out Foreign Pests

Entry Will be Allowed for Scientific Purposes

Only Commercial Shipping Will be Affected

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—There seems to be a wide-spread belief that the Department of Agriculture will exclude all bulbs after this year. The basis for this belief appears to be the schemes, which, as the department has been advised from many sources, are being made to bulb purchasers by dealers and others, that after this year no foreign bulbs will be permitted entry into the United States. The fact is that the department has never placed any limitation on the entry of tulips, hyacinths, crocuses, lilies and the lily of the valley, and these will remain, as in the past, open to unrestricted entry.

All other bulbs, namely the "restricted" bulbs, have been and will remain open to entry to meet any essential needs. Such needs include entry for the introduction of new varieties, for seed stock to establish home production, and for any experimental, educational, or scientific purpose. In other words, ample entry is provided for all purposes which are deemed to have a public service quality, and the restrictions apply merely to commercial entry for immediate sale. There has, therefore, never been any real embargo in force or in view with respect to any class of bulbs.

The reason for the restrictions on the entry of certain bulbs is that it is realized that any importation of bulbs or other plants is attended with an element of danger of bringing in pests, and that this risk increases directly with the variety, volume, and diversity of origin of the imports.

Such danger with any class of plants must be weighed against the horticultural or other need for the plants concerned. With respect to bulbs, it was originally supposed that these were nearly in the same class with seeds as presenting the minimum risk, but the inspection of bulb imports over a series of years has disproved this idea and has shown that bulbs may be the means of introducing general farm pests, some of which are of a highly destructive character.

The reduction of such risk has been the basis of the restrictions which have been placed on the entry of certain classes of bulbs, namely, (1) those which were known to be most liable to carry serious plant pests, and (2) those which are being produced in the United States or are likely in the near future to be so produced; in quantities sufficient to meet home needs, and hence presenting no important horticultural need as an offset to the risk.

Humorist Leads Girl Over State Line to Altar

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, May 10.—Franklin P. Adams, humorist, and Miss Edith Sayles Root, daughter of Charles Towner Root of West Sixty-seventh street, were married this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock by Justice of the Peace Peter D. Donlinger of Greenwich, Ct., at Orchard Farm, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Warfield.

The wedding party, which included many artists and writers, gathered at the home of the Warfields which is in New York State and followed the bride and bridegroom on a 150-foot wedding march to the apple orchard which is in Connecticut. There the ceremony was performed under the apple blossoms.

The reason for the march into the neighboring State was, according to Mr. Adams, that he was forbidden in the divorce decree obtained against him in New York State a month ago by Mrs. Minna Schwartze Adams to marry again in New York State for one year.

Michigan City's Government is Subject of Quiz

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DETROIT, May 10.—Although Julius Kehler, West Owosso real estate dealer, has prepared petitions asking for the recall of the entire City Commission on grounds of incompetency and inefficiency, he has decided to withhold them from circulation temporarily. He will await the report of a Chamber of Commerce committee, named to investigate conditions in the city government.

A Chamber of Commerce committee will investigate the possibilities of the city manager form of government for Owosso.

A week ago the commission discharged Police Chief George Denyes, and City Clerk B. K. Lucas, replacing them with Earl C. Whitehorse and Ivan White.

Advertisements of Rum Barred From Canal Mail

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BALBOA (Panama) May 10.—Mr. Carter, stenographer in the Canal Governor's office and Baptist churchman, questioned the right of the Canal Postoffice to carry Panama newspapers with liquor advertisements, and the District Attorney decided today that all papers getting second-class rates must from tomorrow delete such advertisements, placing the Canal Zone under the 1922 prohibition law. The canal director of posts issued orders accordingly this afternoon.

Mrs. Coolidge Yields, Pet Goes for River Trip

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Rob Roy, the White House collie, whined and cried and won. As his mistress, Mrs. Coolidge, closed the door of the automobile and was about to leave the White House on her trip down the Potomac, the dog bounced out and cried pathetically.

He was invited into the car and whizzed away with President and Mrs. Coolidge to the waiting Presidential yacht, the Mayflower. He took the trip down the river. Rob Roy is a favorite with Mrs. Coolidge, although she tries hard not to show her preference in the presence of the airedale, the other White House pet.

WOMEN OF FRANCE MAY BEAR ARMS

Military Service for Both Sexes is Urged as Remedy Against Depopulation

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, May 10.—Discussing France's loss of population through the increase of deaths over births, the Petit Journal in an editorial suggests that eventually the government will be forced to make girls do military service as potential soldiers to defend the country in case of invasion.

Commenting on the article, the Intransigeant today points out the great advantage of this, remarking that girls play football, hockey, are cross-country runners, and drive automobiles, and conjugal dames use the revolver as efficiently as men.

"Soldiers' knapsacks are no heavier to carry than a market basket," says the article. "Men are becoming rarer in France and we must organize battalions of Amazons.

"The influence of women in the barracks during military training would be helpful. They would put flowers in the window sills, drive out bedbugs and cockroaches and keep the quarters clean.

"Military service for both sexes is the sole remedy against depopulation. A woman acquitting her maternal duties becomes a reservist after having two children and an auxiliary after her third infant."

A fund of $65,000 has been given to the University of Cambridge for a "Capt. Scott Polar Research Institute."

Broadway Show Has Stagehands as Its 'Angels'

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, May 9.—After twenty years as stage hands, Jim Thorpe, stage electrician and Lloyd Kelley, stage carpenter, rose suddenly tonight to the status of impressarios—owners of "Princess Ida" the revival of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, playing at the Shubert Theater.

"Princess Ida" was revived less than a month ago by Lawrence J. Anholt. They decided later that it was a "flop" and that he would close it tonight. Jim and Lloyd talked the situation over between chores, decided that the production could make money and pooling their savings, bought it from scenery to cast. They said they would continue it here, and later perhaps send it on the road.

OUBLE VERNON VICTORY EVENS UP SERIES COUNT

n Thousand Fans See Essickmen Nab Opener, 7 to1, and Annex Closing Tilt by 4 to 1

BY ROBERT E. RAY

By virtue of some great pitching by Wee Willie Ludolph and Barfoot, the Vernon Tigers were able to capture both of yesterday's double-header from the league-leading Seals by scores of 7 to 1 and 4 to 1 before a crowd of 10,000 fans at Vernon Park. The two-ply victory enabled the Bengals to even the series with the Seals at three-all, with the deciding game to be played this afternoon.

The Tigers looked great yesterday, playing errorless ball during the two games, and they also hit the ball hard. Both contests were interesting ones to watch, with the sundown shift a little the more exciting because of threatening rally which the Seals pulled off in the ninth, threatening to tie the score. In the final frame the league leaders got a run on two singles and with none out, but Barfoot, rid of three sluggers, Elmer and Kilduff, and no scored.

"Pete" Mitchell, who had been batted and lost none up to started on the mound for Vernon in the second game and handed his first defeat of the season. Mitchell lasted until the fourth before being rapped for seven hits, his usual luck getting out of a couple of tough scrapes previously.

LUDOLPH CINCH

Ludolph was a cinch in the game, letting the slugging Seals get five hits, their only run in the fourth when big Brower laced one into the left bleachers for the circuit. He was in difficulty on several occasions when the Seals were on the sacks, but managed himself out of the holes without much effort. Aside from Brower's home run, the Seals got but one man as far as second base in the sixth when, with two men doubled against the left board with Mullican on the mound, he grounded to Finn to retire the side.

Barfoot clinched the victory by driving Bob Geary home with the winning runs in the third frame. Two of the runs before forcing in a Cincinnati traffic cop to relieve Geary had the "stop" sign on Vernon traffic, but Bob just walked over the four runs anyway. Davy Crockett took up the hurling task where Geary left off and was smacked for three more tallies, dumb baseball by Mulligan, Kilduff and Crockett, himself, making the Tigers' job easier.

Vernon hopped off into a two-run lead right at the start, by blasting Geary's offerings for four safe smacks. Joe Kelly, who in the five games he has played with the Tigers has lined out ten hits, started the Bengal rally with a sizzling double down the left-field line. Ike Wolfer bounced a single to Rhyne, Kelly taking third. Brower captured Hemingway's liner, but Jim Blakesley delivered a single over second, Kelly scoring and Wolfer taking second. Warner followed with another hit to center, Wolfer legging it over the rubber. Finn hit into a double-play to momentarily allay Mr. Geary of his troubles.

BROWER HOMES

Brower accounted for the lone Seal tally in the fourth when he poled one into the bleachers. After that, though, Ludolph kept the Seals in a passive frame of mind, dusting them off with his fast one when they threatened to get out of line.

Vernon picked up two off Davy Crockett in the fifth when Hemingway doubled, scored on a safe smash by Blakesley, who completed the circuit on Kilduff's error of Warner's roller, and Finn's infield out. Jim Blakesley's potent wallop, which landed fifteen tiers up in the right-field bleachers for a home run, accounted for the final Tiger tally in the seventh frame.

In the second game the Seals got their lone run off Barfoot in the first inning when Gene Valla beat out a bunt, took second on

ZBYSZKO MASTER OF 134 WRESTLING HOLDS

Wladek Zbyszko, who toplines Promoter Lou Daro's beef-trust show at the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry Armory, Exposition Park, the 37th inst., is master of 134 holds catch-as-catch-can.

He also knows fifty-four Greek or Roman holds.

The difference between the two styles is that the Greek or Roman system does not permit holds below the waist.

HOLLAND DETERMINED TO GO THROUGH WITH OLYMPIC GAMES

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—The Netherlands Olympic Committee today issued a manifesto to the nation declaring it to be the committee's irrevocable decision to hold the 1928 Olympic Games in Holland, notwithstanding the vote in the lower house of Parliament last week declining to grant funds to cover part of the expenses.

The manifesto says it has been decided to open a national subscription list to appoint a financial committee to consider means for meeting the requirements. It asserts that among the proposals to get money is the issuing of lottery or premium shares "in order to provide for the success of the meeting and save the honor of the country."

HOLLYWOOD ELEVEN WINS

Los Angeles Athletic Club Soccer Team Beaten in Final Game of Cup Competition

Playing before a large crowd at Loyola Park yesterday afternoon, the Hollywood A. C. soccer team vanquished the Los Angeles Athletic Club eleven in the final of the benefit cup competition by the score of 2 to 0. The winners displayed better shooting powers and were better finishers than their opponents. To these factors can be attributed their victory.

Parkinson was in fine form and early tested Milford with a few shots which the Mercurian goalie safely handled, but it was this player who later succeeded in beating Milford from another quarter. A corner kick had been awarded, which Jimmy Ramsey centered finely, and from the resultant scrimmage in goal mouth, Parkinson headed through. Lakey Thompson made a great try to stop the ball, but he missed by inches. Milford was caught in a position which rendered him wholly unable to save the goal.

Following the goal Hollywood played a defensive game but made occasional sorties towards goal, which, however, failed of results the half ending with Hollywood 1 up.

With the change over, Hollywood dominated much of the play, and tried hard to increase their advantage. Sound defending by Lyons, Davidson and Thompson thwarted their every effort, however, until a penalty was awarded for dangerous play in the dreaded area. Jimmy Teed converted. This counter sewed up the game for Hollywood and took much of the pep out of the Mercurian, although they continued to try hard. Andy Davidson and Billy Downie were the outstanding forwards on the losers' end while Parkinson, and Mitchell were outstanding for the winners. Copeland, center half for Hollywood, contributed much towards the win for Hollywood by his masterly checkmating of Andy Davidson, the flashy center for the Mercurians.

DE HAUTE AND WARD CLASH AT COMPTON

The Compton American Legion has booked Paul De Haute and Battling Ward for their ten-round main event next Friday night. De Haute is the most popular battler that ever stepped in the Legion ring. He proved it the last time he boxed, which was two weeks ago. A packed house saw him and Marty Kane fight to a draw. Ward is a tough Mexican for any man to beat and the winner gets a shot at Kane within the next two weeks. Barney Meyers says that De Haute will be Coast lightweight champ in a year's time.

Lee Morrisey and Bill Williams are scheduled for the six-round semi-wind-up at 155 pounds. Williams is a Compton boy, who boxed at Vernon and Hollywood a year or so ago. He has done some recent boxing in harbor arenas. Other bouts: Chief Cyrus vs. Kid Kerrigan, 126 pounds, six rounds; Georgie Lopez vs. Young Bellamy, 114 pounds, four rounds; Paul Seaman vs. Mickey Semond, 140 pounds, four rounds.

Ortona Captures First Place in Schooner Event

Owen Churchill, the boy wonder among Pacific Coast yachtsmen, slipped another one over on the old heads yesterday by capturing the opening race of the California Yacht Club season with his new R-class sloop, the Angela. It was a spectacular event in light westerly airs, with windjammers of all classes out for the opener.

The R-class scrap was the feature event of the day, the schooners, yawls, ketches and handicap sloops not affording the usual excitement in the light air.

Pierpont Davis, with the Patricia, and Harry Fisher, at the stick of the Peggy, lost a splendid chance to trim the Angela by staging several fights for the windward advantage on the wide reach down the outside of the breakwater from Point Fermin. Churchill slipping down the bay for a commanding lead while the two light-weather sloops were luffing all over the course.

OFF IN A BUNCH

The boats got away to a well-bunched start at 1:10 p.m., the Angela getting the lead and windward position, followed by the Peggy, California and Patricia. The Angela took the lead on the close reach from Minor Fill to Breakwater Light, followed by the Patricia, Peggy and California. They held these relative positions for the remainder of the race, although the Patricia and Peggy closed in on the Angela on the beat home from Long Beach, crossing the line but a few seconds behind the Lipton Cup winner.

In the schooner, yawl and ketch race Dan Laubersheimer's yawl Ortona, carrying a club-topsail, led the field, while the handicap sloop Vite won in her class.

Al Christie, who will break into the R-class ranks next week with the reconditioned Active, renamed Canuck, followed the "R's" about the nine-mile course in his little put-put, Blue Jacket, getting the dope on handling the sporty craft. Vera Steadman, who has signed

Guest Moves to Desmond's and Scott Locates

Paul Scott, former Flintridge professional, who will take over the Montecito job June 15, signed up last week with Halbriter's and will have charge of the indoor golf school until time to start work at the northern club.

Charles Guest, popular custodian of Halbriter's basement course for a number of months, has signed a contract with Desmond's and will be found at the latter location in the future. While with Halbriter's Guest made many friends, and did much for "Loop" golfers, who were unable to get away during week days. The popular indoor course was the scene of many hotly contested putting and approaching contests. Despite his indoor activities, Guest has kept right on his game, and can step out any day and push the best of them.

Five Boston Slingers Unable to Check Tygers

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, May 10.—Johnny Mostil's home-run drive into the left-field bleachers with a runner on base, broke up a twelve-inning game today and gave Chicago a 10-to-8 victory over Washington before a crowd of more than 40,000 persons. The world's champions went on a batting rampage in the sixth inning, driving Faber off the hill and with the aid of Connelly's wildness, scored seven runs. The locals plugged along and tied the count in the eighth when Gregg stepped in and checked the rally. Gregg weakened toward the finish. Lyons pitched great ball when he went to the hill. The score:

DETROIT, May 10.—Five Boston pitchers failed to stop the Tygers today, and Detroit, belting them for fifteen hits, five of which were three-baggers, smashed out a 13-to-5 victory before a crowd of 25,000 persons.

Three Boston errors also figured in the scoring. Seven three-base hits were made during the game, which was played under leaden skies that added to the effectiveness of Stoner's fast ball. The score:

RASCAL WINS IN NORTH

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 10.—The last of a series of three yacht races of the Corinthian Yacht Club's "R" class was won today by Rascal, owned by Lester Stone. The Rascal, which barely nosed out Lady Gay, the winner of yesterday's event, is now qualified to defend the cup against boats of the same type from southern waters.

FRESNO GOLF TEAM DEFEATS SAN JOSE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

FRESNO, May 10.—The Sunnyside Country Club of Fresno defeated the San Jose Golf Club, 34 to 14, here today in the second half of a home and home match. This evened the series, Sunnyside having lost to San Jose there recently.

YOU TELL HIM, JIMMY

Bert Colima fights Kid Mexico at Vernon tomorrow night. Below Bert is getting a little friendly advice from Jimmy McLarnin, the Oakland flash, who is rated one of the most clever fighters on the Pacific Coast. It is Colima's first start locally since he was rocked to sleep by Mickey Walker.

COLIMA IN VERNON COMEBACK

There are probably a half-dozen boys in Los Angeles who come under that heading just now.

There are other good cards in Los Angeles, but none of them have the drawing power at the turnstiles like the above, probably. Put any of these boxing fighters on a program with an opponent who is conceded a chance against him and the place will be packed.

Colima is cast in the role of a comeback for the first time in his life.

Heretofore his name has meant more in Mexican than King Alphonse has in Spanish.

It was Mickey Walker who made Colima take his first backward step in a long time.

Kid Mexico, who faces Colima at Vernon Tuesday night, has been thrown in to compete against the Mexican's color.

Colima defeated Mexico nearly three years ago in a four-round bout which the Kid took on a day's notice.

Ever since then Mexico has wanted another election with Bert after a sufficient amount of training. He has conditioned plenty for this shot.

There'll be no alibis in the aftermath.

Hayden Phythian—University of Southern California football star—appears on the same card in a six-rounder against Henry Melcar.

The collegian has stopped two opponents in less than a round in two professional starts.

He is a knockout hitter. How good he can take it has never been proven as his opponents so far have never touched him.

Melcar has had fifty fights. He has traveled in some very fast company.

SAGEHENS BUST MARK

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

POMONA COLLEGE (Claremont) May 10.—Running for a little afternoon exercise yesterday afternoon four Pomona College track stars bettered the time that has stood for several years as a college record in the four-man half-mile relay. The old college record is 1m. 32 4-10s., and the four runners today did the two laps in exactly 1m. 31 6-10s., cutting 8-10 seconds off the old record.

As there was no competition and as one runner is ineligible for conference competition the record will not stand, but the men plan to repeat the race in the near future, hoping to make a legitimate record. Frisbie ran the first 220, with Hugh Pinney taking the baton. The third furlong featured the beautiful stride of Wilbur Graf and the last 220 was run by Bob Maxwell. Each man averaged 23 9-10 seconds for his furlong.

The time was all the more remarkable as Frisbie and Graff made poor baton passes that lost several tenths of a second.

Finley, who is almost, if not as fast, as Graff, will take the latter's place when the quartet tries for a college record.

HOCKEYITES MIX TONIGHT

Another one of those thrilling ice hockey games is slated for tonight at the Palais De Glace, when the champion Monarchs meet the league All-Stars in a game that will give ice hockey fans a good idea of the exact strength that the Monarchs possess. This will be the last appearance of the champions before they tackle the invading Vancouver outfit at the ice rink Saturday night. The Vancouver Monarchs and the Los Angeles Monarchs meet in a five-game series for the Pacific Coast championship.

Tom Howard, Ashley Gaudin, Jack Wilson, Bill Broadfoot, McKuster, Richards, Jones and Dugan will play with the All-Stars. This bunch is a mighty sweet-looking outfit and the Monarchs will have to extend themselves for once this year. Hommy Murray, manager of the Monarchs, will start Irvin, Shaver, Galbraith, Clark, Phipps and Cantillion in the game tonight.

Bill Scott, who is handling the championship series, is building 500 additional seats in the ice rink to take care of the large crowd expected.

TWO FAMOUS BROTHERS

BY FEG MURRAY

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Among the famous brothers of sport history are the two Polish wrestlers with unpronounceable and unspellable names, Stanislaus and Wladek Zbyszko. Can any other family boast of two such strong and powerful athletes, as well as of a name with so few vowels? William Wambsganss made an unassisted triple play in the 1920 world series, setting a record for baseball and for consonants. But Stan Zbyszko won the world's heavyweight wrestling championship at an age estimated at anywhere from 50 to 58—and at Philadelphia, too, which puts him 25 years, two "Z's" and a "y" and a "k" up on Billy Wambsganss!

Wladek would be much more famous if

HACKMEN KEEP AMERICAN LEAD

Yankees Drop Back During Fourth Week of Play

Athletics and Reds Halted by Unexpected Twirling

Browns Let Down, But Still Cling to First Place

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, May 10.—The first week of major league baseball, accomplished the double result of establishing early eastern leaders in both circuits and clearly defining the status of each club that no position in standing remained under dispute at the close.

The lapse in the powerful attack which marred them through the early season period of ineffectiveness left the Philadelphia Athletics claimed the major baseball men by attaining and holding undisputed possession of first place in the American through five victories and a defeat against the Yankees and the Cleveland Indians.

The rise of the Mackmen after the first ten years in the American League depths to the position occupied by the champion machine of Baker, Collins, Dykes, Bender and other baseball immortals, accompanies their pitching by the undefeated Quinn Gray and timely hitting of Simmons, Bishop and Miller.

The Washington Senators, who split two games by Chicago Athletics, dropped back to second place, while Cleveland, pacesetter of a week ago, were caught by the Philadelphia underdog.

Pitcher Robins, after a brief rallied sharply under the stirring by Grimes, Petty, Rixhard, and contributed the best performance in the opening five of their Fourmaier's exceptional was an inspiration, for the terrible hitting of Ty Cobb, the Detroit outfield and outscored the other both loops, but failure of pitchers to show signs of improvement prevented the Tygers from getting out of the pit on the trail for the week.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER

BILL HENRY

LATEST reports have it that Keith Lloyd of U.S.C. has been reinstated and will compete for the Trojans at the I.C.A.A.A.A. meet, which comes in the next few weeks. At the time of writing this has not been confirmed and all that anybody can do is to hope that it is true, not only for the sake of the Trojan chances at the big meet, but also for the sake of Lloyd himself, who will otherwise have wasted, practically speaking, his entire college career as an athlete.

To us Lloyd is the most convincing sprinter since the days of Drew and Paddock. We do not regard Lloyd as the equal of these runners, but he is certainly the most consistent sprinter we've ever laid eyes on any place and at any time. To us Lloyd's limit looks to be about 9.9s., and he appears capable of making that any and every time he starts.

That's more than you can even say of Drew and Paddock. They were both unquestionably 9.6s. sprinters, but each of them made this speed only two or three times in his career, being consistent at 9.8s. for the century. Lloyd isn't as fast as they were, but he is far more consistent in his ability to develop his maximum speed regardless of any and all conditions.

As far as Lloyd's guilt is concerned we have no information and we believe that matter can safely be left to the authorities at U.S.C., who certainly seem to be leaning over backward this year in an attempt to uphold the scholastic standing of the university. If Lloyd's guilt is only technical or doesn't exist at all it would be a shame to deprive him of the opportunity of running his last race for the school. If he really has done something he shouldn't—well, that's different. We hope he runs.

* * *

We have a sneaking hunch that the Trojans have a chance to grab off that I.C.A.A.A.A. title, or at least finish high up. Both Stanford and California, which were rated stronger than U.S.C. this year, have their main strength available for dual meets, whereas, the Trojans will develop greater power proportionately in a great affair like the I.C.A.A.A.A., where a few stars cut more ice than numerical strength.

Bud Houser is practically a certainty for eight points and a good possibility for ten. Norm Anderson will also place in the shot. Ross ought to pick up an odd point or so in the high jump. The Trojans look comparatively certain to grab ten points in the field, and possibly two or three more than that.

* * *

Leighton Dye doesn't figure to finish worse than second in the high hurdles and is a good bet for first. Otto Anderson is a strong young man and ought to place well up. Dye, Anderson and Grumbles are just about certain to take at least two places in the low sticks. Something like ten points might come the U.S.C. way in the hurdles alone.

Give the Trojans a fair shot at first or second in the hundred with Lloyd, a possible place in the quarter with Torkelson or Marts—the latter seems to be coming to life at last—and a good shot at an odd point or so in the half with Niersbach, and you have a grand total of about thirty possible points, which would just about clinch the meet and would be certain to place in the first three.

BENGALS ANNEX DOUBLE-HEADER

Mulligan's infield out, and scored when Paul Waner poked one to center for a base. Waner was out trying to take second on the throw-in, while Brower flied to Kelly for the third out.

Mitchell bucked his way through both the first and second innings without being scored on because of some none-too-good base running by the Tigers. In the third, though, Lady Luck temporarily deserted the lanky southpaw, the Tigers bunching three hits, putting over two runs, and taking a lead from which they were never ousted.

BAREFOOT HITS

Barfoot, who beat the Seals in the first game of the series by rapping out a home run with one on, started the rally by rifling a hit to left. The Tiger twirler took second on Kelly's infield out, and scored on Wolfer's single to center. Hemingway followed with a smash to center that Valla misjudged, the hit going for a triple and bringing Wolfer over the platter. Kilduff made a great catch of Griffin's pop fly, which the high wind crazily wafted around in the ozone, and then threw to Ritchie in time to double Hemingway, who tried to score after the catch at the plate.

In the fourth frame Brower caught one of Barfoot's fast ones on the nose and the drive seemed labeled for a ride way up into the right-field bleachers, but the wind once more came into play, blowing the ball back so far that Wes Griffin, who cavorted in right field, was able to stab it up against the bleacher wall with one hand. It was a great catch on Griffin's part.

Mitchell was rapped to the showers in the seventh, when four more Vernon hits produced two more Tiger tallies. Finn opened with a hit through the box that came close to tearing one of Mitchell's legs off, and went clear to second when Valla let the ball get by him. McDowell hit to Rhyne, who threw to Mulligan, getting Finn at third. Hard-hearted Hannah followed with a single to left, while Barfoot also singled, scoring McDowell, whereupon Mr. Mitchell was derricked in favor of Marty Griffin. Kelly fanned, but Wolfer walked, filling the sacks. Hemingway cracked a single off Mulligan's shins, Hannah romping home. Griffin flied to Waner to end the inning.

STANDARD SHUTS OUT PAN

Vail, Standard Oil pitcher, had a little too much stuff on the ball for the Pan American nine yesterday and his team won by a 6-to-0 score at Maier Park. Vail allowed but seven hits and had them well scattered, the most the Panmen got were two in the seventh and two in the eighth. Murrin and Phelps each got a pair of hits for the winners. The score:

Not satisfied with trimming Whatley, Ferguson won second honors in the special match play against par event at the popular Brentwood club, finishing 4 down. W. E. Shepherd finished 3 down in the event to win titular honors. F. H. Moon and Marshall Simpson, both 5 down, tied for third place.

CORINNE LOVELY

BUT "DECLASSE" IS QUITE TOO DECLASSE

By Grace Kingsley

The trouble with "Declasse" is it's declasse!

Oh, they've made it into a black-and-white movie, all right — Zoe Akins's brilliantly colorful, finely shaded play, "Declasse!" The heroine is all white, and how they have cleaned up that naughty, cheating hero! And how they have blackened up the merely human Jew. How you do realize, in short, when you are looking at the picture down at Loew's, that the screen has only two dimensions and is all black and white!

But as the lovely and sympathetically intelligent Corinne Griffith plays the heroine, you will probably enjoy it. I did—when she was on the screen.

After all, I doubt whether anybody could have done more with it. If you try to play a symphony on a mouth organ, you won't get a symphony, that's all.

Movie morals are so funny. For instance, the powers that be made the man who cheated at cards, the likable Ned Thayer, into the brother-in-law of the incorrigible Mrs. Leslie—a sympathetic brother-in-law—who merely cheated to help her pay her debts. Whereas, if "Declasse" has any morals, they are concerned only with a higher squeamishness at cheating at all at anything for any reason. And instead of portraying Thayer as a wayward but human kid who cheated at cards because he was a bit of a rotter, and who afterward, in violent anger, turned cad enough to give Lady Helen's letters to her husband, when she tried to make him apologize for cheating, they eased the situation by having Mrs. Leslie turn over the letters in true movie fashion.

And as for the heroine—ooh, forget, if you saw the gorgeous Ethel Barrymore trifle with moods and utter bright glancing thoughts in nonchalant humor, while conveying all the time a wistful idea of being utterly honest in the things that matter to a thoroughbred—forget all about her. Miss Griffith, I happen to know, wasn't to blame for having to shelve all the delicate niceties—they were taken out of the story for her. But she is very, very lovely and distinguished and type perfect. Only the real Lady Helen, with her tremulous gayety, her little moods and humors and helpless drifting, isn't there.

And she did convey a sense, even without subtities, of a quite innate high-born disdain for what seemed to her the worthless things of life—just show and pinchbeck morals. But nobody understood her ideal quite—and life did terrible things to her because of that fact. But the character, due to the way the story is written, is quite without light and shade.

There is one good, hardy perennial immorality that flourishes in the movies. That is the movie villain's right to "proposition" the heroine. And don't they work it for all they are worth in this story! Why, Solomon never even proposed as he did in the play. And the heroine said, "If I accept, I will convey the fact to you by wearing your orchids!" Oh, they wouldn't fail to do that in the movies!

She talked and pothered a lot about her honor in the picture—though in the play it was so much a part of her, that honor, that she had no need to mention it. So, finally, rather than be dishonored, she went and hopped in front of a taxi. How much stronger was the play, in which Solomon himself relinquished her, and she felt it dishonor, after accepting Solomon's proposal of marriage and after finding the man she loved had come back, to go on with her marriage.

And then there's that happy ending! In her lover's arms, of course. And to make sure it was a movie, there was some terrible comedy relief.

Clive Brook is magnificent as Rudolph Solomon—just fine enough to understand that Lady Helen was too fine for him, with his temperamental limitations despite all his veneer. This man thinks and gets his thoughts and his delicate balances of portrayal and of thought across to us.

The other players were all adequate, and the production is gorgeous.

BEBE DANIELS GREAT IN "CROWDED HOUR"

If Bebe Daniels ever gets a really great story, she is going to become the screen's greatest actress. Mark my words. She shows that she already is, for that matter even in the highly theatrical "Crowded Hour," at the Rialto. Why don't those Lasky people turn Bebe loose to do her greatest in some great, world-famed story, instead of wasting her on even such above-mediocre things as this one? There is nothing she cannot do in the way of emotional acting. She proves it now. Every trace of the old self-consciousness has vanished. She has more dramatic fire than any other actress, even more than the fiery Pola. I believe that in the future the race will be among Bebe, Pola and that wonderfully awakened child, Carol Dempster.

Strangely enough, too, Bebe has always had the power, so far as I am concerned, of getting into a role so that I forgot that she was just an actress I knew playing a part. Now she has added complete self-forgetfulness and a flawless technique to that basic power. Moreover, don't forget that Bebe has great comedy abilities.

"The Crowded Hour" likewise shows us that we adore war plays. Rather to our surprise, too. We thrill even more in the lighting of the old fires than we did when the flame first brightened in the war days.

But we are more captious. We rather want the truth, nowadays, for war has lost all its illusions for us, now that we have seen our maimed soldiers and heard their tales. So the stories must be pretty well on the side lines, where laughter came often really, as it does in "The Crowded Hour," or it must deal with the hell-of-war verities honestly, as in "What Price Glory."

As the charming musical comedy and variety queen who gave up her career to follow the man she loved overseas to work for the Y, Bebe had many chances for excellent acting, within the range of the story, and didn't let any of them slide.

T. Roy Barnes as the vaudeville actor was a keen delight. Kenneth Harlan was entirely adequate as the handsome hero. Moreover, I wasn't irked by his appearing in a soldier's uniform, for he really wore one during the war. But Kenneth must watch the old weight! Helen Lee Worthing was charming, and the others pleased.

The kid comedy "Dragon Alley," was amusing and the other features excellent.

"NIGHT CLUB" RIB-TICKLING

BY HERBERT MOULTON

There's plenty of variety and plenty of mirth—particularly mirth—with Raymond Griffith as the star of "The Night Club" furnishing the largest share of both.

It's really a new Raymond Griffith who appears in "The Night Club." To be sure, there are innumerable flashes of him as he is perhaps best known to the motion-picture public—glimpses of the deft and debonair comique of many a feature photoplay—but never before has he been permitted to give such a wide play to his especial talent for fun-making.

Griffith has what is undoubtedly the best role of his career in "The Night Club," and he makes capital of every opportunity offered. Without him the picture would have little to commend it. His is the bright personality that sparkles through it from start to finish, excepting for one or two sequences of slapstick antics which seemed to be detrimental.

It is needless to stress that "Cobra" reflects a mood almost completely serious. Indeed, it may be found too intensely so by some. The audience reacted peculiarly by laughing at one or two of the more impassioned and highly emotional scenes at the matinee, though this might not be typical of the subsequent performances.

I cannot feel that the play is in any sense heavy. The author has enlivened every moment with a cleverness of style, and a grace of expression in action and words that may be described as rare. Deft is the word that best sums up the play as a whole.

The playing can be improved. It undoubtedly will be as the show goes on.

The role of Jack Race is a big one for Harland Tucker, and I think that he can make it a big accomplishment. In many aspects it was very excellently done by him at the opening. Some of his tenser scenes were exceptional. His performance as a whole needs more light and shade and humanness. He received an ovation for his work such as he well deserved.

Charlotte Treadway could be subtler in her delineation of the wife. Yet it is an earnest and effective achievement that she registers in the portrayal. Much of it was splendid.

J. Morris Foster disappoints a little at first, but grows on one. His final scene was unusually well done.

Anne MacKay has something of naturalness and poise to gain in her interpretation of the pure-minded girl. She is very good as a type for the part.

Glenna Farrell is the other member of the cast, and was very acceptable in her brief chance in the opening scene.

Altogether, if you quest for something unusual in plays, you may consider "Cobra" as an attraction well worth seeing.

MOVES SLOWLY

"Her Husband's Secret," at Forum, Not Up to Standard

Queer as it may seem, some one has had the audacity to name a present-day photoplay "Her Husband's Secret," and then try to make a serious drama out of it. The remains are showing this week at the Forum Theater.

The most persistent impression with one after having seen the picture is that this same someone had taken all twenty-four of the available stock plots and mixed them up in a hat and then drawn sequence by sequence from it until the required seven reels were provided. And, the only note of coherency is that they all move intolerably slow. Some of the tricks are so hoary that with respect for their age one is loath to ridicule them.

Not even the presence of the handsome Antonio Moreno and the dancing-eyed little Patsy Ruth Miller can substitute or offset the trite action they are forced to go through.

Set in a leisurely country estate on the Maine coast, the story bridges a period from the early '90's to the present day. A mother deserted by a mercenary husband and separated from her son gives her love to the girl on the neighboring estate, and also to the girl's banker father.

Grown to manhood, the son displays traits similar to those of his father and when the brokerage firm which he represents goes on the rocks he saves it and himself by marrying the wealthy girl, who has virtually thrown herself at his head. But when he asks the father for a loan of several hundred thousand dollars he is shown the highest cliff to jump off. The son hesitates but the father "urges" him off and down on the rocks, quite literal ones, does he fall.

Of course, it doesn't kill him. Who ever heard of a jump from a 200-foot cliff killing a hero? With a well-bred shrug he arouses himself and accompanied by the now remorseful father-in-law, probably arrives home in time to christen the inevitable baby. And that's all there is to this "secret of the young spouse." Frank Lloyd is responsible for the direction, although it doesn't seem possible when you remember it was he who did "The Sea Hawk."

Ruth Clifford makes a perfect Gibson girl as the young mother in the early sequences and others in the cast are Phyllis Haver, Walter McGrail and David Torrence.

The real joy of the program is the heavenly music supplied by Max Fischer and his orchestra. Even though they play only four numbers their blending of syncopated melody is well worth the whole price of admission.

"LOVE'S BARGAIN" HAS WEAKNESSES

The mere statement that "Love's Bargain," now appearing at the California Theater, reveals little Marjorie Daw as a dancer of the underworld of Paris shows at the beginning that something is decidedly wrong with the picture. Marjorie with her wide trusting eyes, unswept by worldliness, could never have danced the wild Apache dance which in the picture made her the rage of sophisticated Paris.

There are several other things wrong with the picture. The plot seems to have had an attack of aphasia, for it wanders aimlessly about until at last it ends without any more purpose than it started. The general idea is that a girl, dancing in an underworld cafe, is discovered by a Frenchman, who introduces her to a famous producer.

The producer makes her the first dancer of Paris and then on the eve of her success she marries him out of gratitude. One gathers that she finds out later that she loves the Frenchman and at the close of the picture the husband goes out into the night while the Frenchman and the dancer sit on the settee and plan their future.

Clive Brook plays the husband who bargains for Miss Daw's love. It does not seem logical to show Clive Brook in so many films as the man of questionable honor who loses out in the end. It always raises a doubt as to the sanity of the girl, for his performance is usually much stronger than that of the "other man."

There is this to be said about "Love's Bargain." It reveals Marjorie Daw in a new and beautiful light. Seldom has she appeared more lovely than in this picture, even though she is hopelessly miscast. There is something about her which always suggests youth and child-like innocence. A Parisian underworld background does not in the least suit her.

A clever "Our Gang" comedy is included in the California program this week. The "Gang" adventure in a haunted house on their way west to search for Indians. It is entirely enjoyable.

The California Chanters also add materially to the program.

LITTLE SYMPHONY OFFERS NOVELTIES

BY FRANCIS KENDIG

The Little Symphony Orchestra was heard Saturday morning at the Biltmore in a program replete with charm and individuality. Adolph Tandler, the director, selected music at once novel and satisfying. Grainger's "Colonial Song," Mozart's "Night Music" and Korngold's "Snowman," pantomime music made up the program.

The intimacy of a little symphony orchestra is always a delightful thing, and Mr. Tandler, with his innate love for detailed finesse, fits admirably into the role of conductor for this ensemble. The Korngold number is in the modern Viennese vein—perhaps not so colorful as Strauss, but in a pleasant idiom of thoroughly brilliant outline. Young Korngold wrote the number during the period when he was still something of a child wonder, and the music reflects both the influence of the musical city in which he lives and his own sparkling originality.

Grainger's "Colonial Song" includes in the scoring two voices singing their parts on open vowels—quite as pleasing as novel. For a long time the writer has wondered why the use of the voice had to be restrained, so to speak, for conventional song form. As an instrument of pure tone it is richer and more varied than most of the instruments of the orchestra, and it blends nicely with a considerable numer of them.

Huttman Pupils Sing

Voice pupils of Frederic Huttman were heard in a well-attended recital Saturday night. Opera arias in Italian and German and miscellaneous songs and records of Mr. Huttman's pupil, Emmy Bettendorf of the German State Opera, made up the program.

Voice is beyond doubt the most difficult branch of the arts to teach, because students deal with a hidden instrument subject to their own physical ills, and because the song is not only the result of careful study, but also of the mental concept of the singer. Many and diverse are the theories concerning the best and wisest methods of developing the vocal organs and the art of song.

For such reason the splendid results which Mr. Huttman has obtained are particularly interesting inasmuch as this is the first local pupils' recital which Mr. Huttman has given, for he has been in Los Angeles a comparatively short time. His students sing with evenness in both range and volume, and they take each tone cleanly and clearly, avoiding any tendency to slip or slide from one note to another. Likewise they handle their voices in such a manner as to always make the tone mellow and beautiful, not forcing the volume beyond its easy capabilities. The recital throughout was a marked success.

Kall Pianists Heard

The advanced pupils of Dr. Alexius Kall played yesterday afternoon at Philharmonic; it was gratifying to find a really large audience present at this—his third annual program. The numbers selected were of the type frequently found on the programs of the traveling virtuosi.

In the order of pretentiousness, first to be mentioned is the first movement of the Second Rachmaninoff Concerto, played by that real artist Frances Mae Martin; important, also, was the Weber Konzertstuck, and Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasy." These numbers were played by Dr. Kall at the second piano. A movement from MacDowell's "Tragic Sonata," three Scriabine Etudes, and miscellaneous numbers complete the outline of the afternoon's musical offering.

Another student who deserves especial mention—and they all do, for that matter—was the little 11-year-old girl, Cecilia Geschichter, playing the Bach Overture from Partitia No. 4; she rendered the number with real intelligence and insight.

One can generally depend upon Dr. Kall's students pretty well in concerto work, and indeed few other piano teachers give their students training in this type of performance, or any of the longer masterpieces. For this particular variety of the literature for piano Dr. Kall is especially suited, for he feels music vividly and broadly. All of the students play brilliantly, and they get over the keys with amazing dexterity.

PLAYDOM

"COBRA" ENGROSSING

WELL-WRITTEN DRAMA OFFERS SERIOUS THEME

By Edwin Schallert

The praises of yet another stage production may be fittingly chanted, and this time it is the Morosco Theater that is the setting for the offering of unusual merit. A deft study in the art of playwriting is the New York success, "Cobra," which opened there yesterday afternoon, breaking for once the spell of comedy in favor of drama of a more tensely emotional character.

This season, at least, I have seldom been present at a theatrical entertainment that has proved more vital and engrossing than this play by Martin Brown, which treats quite forcibly, though with intelligence, of a sex theme.

Its smooth technique is captivating. The lines flash at times a keen sharp brilliance. There are lighter pauses in the action, and a delicacy of sentiment.

Most of all, though, what is to be relished is the deeper, ruddier glow of feeling, growing out of the contrast between a tawdry passion on the one hand, and a fine spiritual love and a noble form of friendship.

Something, too, the playwright has caught of the measure of values of today. He does not avoid the muddier morals entirely, but he insists with caution and reserve on the worth of ideals and clean living. Mainly, it is the facts that he brings forward in a situation, not altogether pleasant, but nevertheless wholly absorbing.

It is the man's problem that appeals rather than the woman's. Yet the feminine characters are vitally important to the progress of the plot. They do not so strongly hold the sympathy, however, as the Cambridge student and his friend, subsequently partners in an art collector's establishment.

It is the friendship between the two men which furnishes the ground for conflict. One has taken life much as he found it, missing nothing of pleasure and excitement by the way. The other is a thoroughgoing idealist, described in the play as old-fashioned. The woman is drawn to the former, but, because of his wealth, marries the latter.

The marriage is one entirely of convenience for her. It wearies and palls her, an leads to liaisons, and eventually an attempt on her part secretly to break down the friendship between the two men.

The climax is the presumed rendezvous between them during the husband's absence. The news is told of the burning of a hotel at which the woman is known to have resorted. The man is aware of the fact that he had taken her there the night before and left her, and in a degree he feels responsible for the tragedy that has bereft his friend of the wife to whom he was so idealistically devoted.

GOOD WESTERN FILM SHOWING AT CAMEO

For those who enjoy the rollicking western films with fast riding and plenty of gunplay, "The Saddle Hawk," now appearing at the Cameo Theater with Hoot Gibson featured, will command a good deal of attention. It is a thoroughly interesting picture and is quite consistent in its western atmosphere.

Hoot Gibson is able to create a very humorous, human hero out of the old cloth of which all western pictures are made. His face fairly beaming with mild good nature offsets quite cleverly his scheming to rescue the girl from the gang of roughnecks.

There is nothing unusual in the story of "The Saddle Hawk." Heroes of western films before this have had to fight for the possession of the girl—have plotted against a disreputable gang of cattle rustlers—and have escaped through an upper window of the ranch house while the gang storms the stairway.

However, it is really a consistently good western picture. The riding is rapid and worth seeing—the scenery comes up to standard and the girl is pretty. So all requirements are met. Marian Nixon as the rancher's daughter who is kidnaped by various gangs, and who is always rescued by Hoot Gibson, is quite attractive, although no demands are made upon her in a dramatic way.

Bacon Believes Drama Found in Simple Things

Like all persons in the world of make-believe who have seen its eminences tinted, who have found some rose-strewn path, who have followed its seasons and recorded each variation, Lloyd Bacon is among those who find drama in the simplest things of every-day life. Directing comedy, Mr. Bacon naturally thinks a lot about drama, for, he says, its material is just the same, the difference being the treatment.

Which leads us to his ambition.

Some day he wants his name inscribed as director on the perfect screen drama, and the idea will be the simplest, the acting and direction likewise. He will have, he says, a small cast in the most human of vehicles—with a climax that happens without striving for it.

"The simple things have been overlooked. Poignant drama could be found especially in some localities where I have lived on the mere loss of Johnnie's shoe," says Lloyd Bacon. "Guy De Maupassant wove immemorable tales out of the smallest trifles that kept growing to grim tragedies. It is said of him that all his comedies were tragedies and all his tragedies were comedies.

"So our comedy director who is always utilizing seeming trifles is prepared to handle drama with great ease. For he must be spontaneous and the trouble with many dramatic offerings is the lack of spontaneity."

Loyal Support Aids Effort of Universal Chief

It's not about producing bigger and better pictures. On the contrary, he is concerned with the welfare of the thousands of employees who look to him as their beacon.

For several years the joke of Hollywood has been about the perennial changes of managers at Universal studio. Every rumor that preceded the inevitable decapitation of the studio head meant the loss of thousands of dollars in deficient work on the part of the employees.

Recently Carl Laemmle decided to choose from the ranks and the announcement that Raymond L. Schrock, scenario editor, will succeed Julius Bernheim was enthusiastically received in the film world.

Of a commanding personality, Schrock has imbued the thousands of Universal employees with the esprit d'corps that is absolutely essential to the successful making of such productions as "The Phantom of the Opera," which recently scored a tremendous success at its premiere in San Francisco.

Considered one of the foremost authorities on stories and continuities, Schrock has surrounded himself with such notables as Bill Younger, Charles Kenyon, Frank Griffin, Mary O'Hara and a host of others.

Already twelve companies are at work, with seven more ready to start this week.

According to Norman Sprowl, business manager from New York, the efficiency and loyalty of the employees is one hundred per cent and results consistent with this policy are already appearing.

The Bolivian government will grant entrance free of duty and reduced freight rates to foreign samples sent to the industrial exposition beginning at La Paz, August 6.

Modern Gowns for Talmadge in 'Graustark'

While feverish activity is being shown by designers who are planning new and elaborate gowns for Norma and Constance Talmadge in "Graustark" and "Her Sister from Paris," Buster Keaton intends to abandon his dress-up roles and go back to his old character clothes in his next production, now being planned.

When it was decided to modernize "Graustark" and to eliminate all period costumes from the celebrated story designers realized they faced a new problem. They must gown Norma as a princess yet avoid the conventional costumes which a princess might be expected to wear.

Within the next two weeks Norma will neter into the elaborate throne room scenes of the story in which she will wear a series of new and striking gowns. One of the most amazing is an evening gown of striking originality.

The same problem which faced designers in "Graustark" arose when Constance began work on "Her Sister from Paris."

In "Her Sister from Paris" Constance plays two roles. In one she is a quiet little domesticated bride very much in love with her husband. In the other she is her own sister from Paris, a madcap dancer and charmer of hearts.

Designers realized that Constance's costumes must emphasize the decided change in her personality. Great care was spent in making house dresses that would bring out her domesticated role, but even greater care was lavished on the striking creations she wears as the madcap sister from Paris.

Sir J. W. Nott-Bower, Commissioner of Police in London for twenty-three years, will soon retire.

NEWS OF SOUTHERN COUNTIES

SAN DIEGO ZOO CLEARINGHOUSE

To Pass on Australian Fauna Entering America

Wallabies, Wallaroos, to be in First Shipment

Embargo on Kangaroos, Emus and Other Specimens

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, May 10.—The Zoological Society of San Diego henceforth will act as the American representative of the Taronga Park Zoological Trust of Sydney, Australia, and especially all Australian fauna shipped to this country will be cleared through the local society, it was announced today by Dr. Harry Webseforth, president of the San Diego Zoo.

This arrangement it was said, was made between the two societies several months ago at the time T. N. Faulconer, director of the San Diego Zoo, was in Sydney gathering specimens for the local institution. The agreement was not made public sooner because of a number of details remaining to be worked out, it is explained.

The first shipment of animals and birds under this agreement will leave Australia early in August and will comprise nearly 200 specimens, including kangaroos and such oddly named subjects as wallabies, wallaroos, dingoes, wombats, Tasmanian devils, cockatoos, black swan, brush turkeys, mallee fowl and bower birds.

A strict embargo has been placed upon kangaroos, emus, platypi and other specimens indigenous to Australia, the government of that country having forbidden exportation of their rapidly disappearing fauna except on specific requests of recognized public zoological gardens or other educational institutions. Until recently, animal dealers have been permitted to bring out large shipments of animals and birds, which were sold to zoos, circuses and other animal dealers. Many of the specimens died in transit or in the shops of the animal dealers from lack of proper food and treatment, which resulted in the passage of laws forbidding the exportation of any fauna without the government permits.

In the future the San Diego Zoo will supervise the shipments and forward specimens to other zoos.

REDLANDS PLANNING TWO NEW SCHOOLS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, May 10.—The corner-stones of the two new public school buildings in Redlands, the Kingsbury School at Cypress and Cajon being built at a cost of $135,000 and the Franklin School on Colton avenue being built at a cost of $115,000, will be laid on June 3 by the Grand Lodge of Masons of California. D. J. Reese, the Grand Master of the order in this State, will be in charge of the ceremonies.

Mr. Reese is president of the State Civil Service Commission and publisher of the Ventura Free Press. His staff will consist of many men prominent in both civic and fraternal affairs in the State.

ELEVATOR MAN GOES IN FOR STATISTICS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

HUNTINGTON PARK, May 10. Traveling about four and one-half miles in a passenger elevator each day, John Moose of this city has the only job of the kind in Huntington Park, his place of employment being the new Hellman Bank Building, where he has charge of the passenger elevator, which carries people to and from the many offices in the building. Moose kept count of the trips made recently during a busy day, and he states that there were 400 round-trips made, each round trip being sixty feet, which would be about four and one-half miles. He has figured out that it takes fourteen seconds to make the trip up, and thirteen seconds making it down, which is twenty-seven seconds, or exactly three hours each day.

RUSH INGLEWOOD SHOW

Artisans Labor Day and Night on Centinela Valley Exposition Buildings

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

INGLEWOOD, May 10.—In order to have everything in readiness for Inglewood's big show that opens tomorrow, the Centinela Valley Industrial Exposition, workmen toiled all night and all through the Sabbath in final preparation of the exhibits.

More than 100 industrial concerns are taking this opportunity to display their products. More than this, many of the larger ones are making arrangements for placing guides at the disposal of visitors interested in making personally conducted tours of the plant, such as the huge chair factory, the largest on the Pacific Coast, with its hundreds of employees; the Inglewood Manufacturing Company; the big enamelware plant of the Smoot-Holman Company; the Hicks Dovetail Lath Company; the J. G. Shaw Company, packers of "Sunny Jim" prunes; the Southland Fruit Products Company, makers of delicious Southland glace fruit in novel and unusual forms, and many others.

Spirited rivalry between a style show displaying women's finery, as well as real girlish charms, and a fashion show exhibiting the latest in modes for men, draped on the broad shoulders and muscular forms of athletic youths is anticipated.

There will also be a motor-car parade opening the show, one of the big features of the exposition being an automobile show in one of the huge circus tents that will house the exposition. These are located on North Market street, just off the Redondo Boulevard, thus easy of access for motorists, passengers on busses or the E cars of the Pacific Electric.

Last, but not least, is the battle now on between rivals for queen of the carnival, that will be the final event of Saturday night. Constance Zillgitt, Elizabeth Floyd, Marcia Dale and Winifreda Young are rivals for this honor.

PIONEER MASONIC LODGE TO CELEBRATE

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

EL MONTE, May 10.—In celebration of the sixty-ninth anniversary of its founding, the Lexington Lodge, F. and A.M. of El Monte, will entertain members and wives at a chicken dinner and entertainment next Friday evening at the Masonic Temple in this city. Dancing and cards are also planned as a part of the evening's events.

Lexington Lodge, founded in 1856, is one of the oldest in the State of California. Because El Monte was situated at the end of the Santa Fe Trail, the community was the center of activity for miles around, drawing members for the lodge from great distances. Tales are told of horseback rides from San Fernando and San Bernardino, and the meetings were held on Saturday nights so that the return journeys could be made on Sunday. Meetings of the lodge are still held on Saturday night.

Silver vestments, tools, and instruments, now in use in the lodge, were carried around Cape Horn from Boston.

CHURCH BURGLAR AT ORANGE BUSY AGAIN

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ORANGE, May 10.—The church burglar, who made his debut here several weeks ago by robbing the contribution box of the First Methodist Church of $100, swept down upon the city again a few nights ago, according to a report on file with local police.

Miss Minnie Shaffer, 282 North Shaffer street, was the latest victim. The young lady, according to the report, had parked her machine in front of the Immanuel Lutheran Church, corner of Chapman avenue and Pine street.

While she was inside attending a church program, the thief ransacked her car, escaping with a black pocketbook containing valuable papers, $8 in silver and currency, and a number of other items, including an automobile registration certificate.

REDLAND JUVENILES ON GOOD BEHAVIOR

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, May 10.—A survey just completed by Marshal Walter Thomas shows that juvenile delinquency in this city is on the decrease. Most of the cases of recent weeks have been matters of mischievousness rather than delinquency. Marshal Larmore says that for the past year there has been a noticeable improvement in the matter of trouble with juveniles. There has been no real difficulty since one period last summer when the officers had trouble with a gang of park rowdies which culminated in one bad case with a girl. Joseph Rivera, veteran constable here; H. G. Clement, superintendent of schools, and others all say that great improvement has been made in juvenile conditions.

Water in South Pasadena Gets Bill of Health

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SOUTH PASADENA, May 10.—City officials of South Pasadena are indignant over the reports that agents for a bottled water concern are circulating throughout the city telling the citizens that the municipal water is impure and that all who drink it are subjecting themselves to disease. A statement was issued by the city engineer denying that such a condition exists and the police were ordered to arrest the agents on sight.

The water agents are said to have spread the report that the municipal water supply is impure due to polution by sewage. Nearly a year ago a sewage pipe did break and the water in this locality was polluted with diphtheria germs. The matter was immediately remedied, however, and no further trouble along this line has been experienced since, city officials declare.

"In addition to there being not the slightest ground of truth in the allegation, it is obviously made as a 'trade dodge' and the serious effect has been to upset the minds of a number of people. Whether this method of salesmanship is being used with the knowledge of any official or officials of the company we are not prepared to say upon the present evidence," William J. Fox, city engineer, said.

"I wish to say emphatically that the municipal water supply of South Pasadena will measure up for purity with that of any city in Southern California. Persons making statements to the contrary will be held to strict account for their action," the engineer further declared.

There they will be guests of Yamaguchis, proprietor of a chain of the largest hotels in Japan. The Yamaguchis have a great resort on the Pacific and it is here that the Riverside people will probably spend a great deal of their time.

An average of more than one member of each of the 132 families in Redlands is now attending the public schools. CRASHES FAIL TO FRIGHTEN

Girl in Traffic Accident When Three Killed Near Santa Ana Still Prefers Autos to Walking

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ORANGE, May 10.—Although her three companions were killed, while two, including her sister, were critically injured, Miss Allene Haines, aged 20, this city, the only survivor able to relate details of the tragic grade-crossing accident west of Santa Ana, today bravely declared she still preferred automobiles to walking.

At the same time, the girl, who is a graduate of Orange High School, revealed that the crash in which a Pacific Electric car struck an automobile containing three young couples, killing Miss Lucille Bloomer, 17 years of age, of Villa Park; Glenn Richards, 20, Santa Ana, and Raymond Kemp, 21, Glendora, and seriously injuring her sister, Marjorie, 16, and Charles Bing, 21, Santa Ana, was not the only wreck which she has experienced in recent weeks.

Not more than three weeks ago, she told reporters, she was involved in another motor crash resulting in a boy compahion sustaining several fractured ribs, while she, herself, received painful injuries to her jaw when she was hurled against the steering wheel.

"I guess I have received my share of auto accidents," she reflected, gingerly running her free hand over the bandages that envelop her fractured arm injured in the last mishap. "Perhaps, now, I may be immune from future accidents."

"I shall not be afraid of automobiles in the future, though," she added. "A young person must have a good time, and you can't walk to the beaches. And as for a horse and buggy, why be hard on the poor horses."

Packing Plant at Oxnard Will be Built Soon

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OXNARD, May 10.—According to a statement given out today by Supt. John Caweltl of the Southern Pacific Milling Company, stationed at Camarillo, a new warehouse to replace the old wooden structure, which was destroyed by fire with $250,000 loss less than a month ago, will be built immediately. Excavating for the foundation will start this week. The building will be 400 feet in length and seventy-five feet wide. It will be constructed of concrete and corrugated iron. The south end will be partly asbestos to prevent a recurrence of fire spreading from other buildings adjoining.

Esposito & Durnil, vegetable packers, whose packing sheds were also destroyed in the blaze, have nearly completed construction of their new packing shed, which is considerably larger than their former buildings. Lettuce packing is now under way. The new bean warehouse of the milling company will be completed and the machinery installed before the new crop of beans is ready for storage. The building will be the finest of its kind in this section when finished.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANFORD, May 10. — Two phases of the Lee Camp murder cases will be considered in the Superior Court here tomorrow. The will contest over the large estate of Camp, instituted by Attorney Clark Clement on behalf of decedent's sister and only blood relative, Mrs. Pearl Camp King, will be up on the motion to strike out certain parts of the pleadings. Camp willed all his property to his foster mother, Mrs. Laura Brown, and named her as executrix of his estate.

In her petition asking for the revocation of her brother's will, Mrs. King has made many serious accusations against Mrs. Brown, among them being attempts of Mrs. Brown to take the life of Mrs. King and that Mrs. Brown used undue influence to have Camp make his will in her favor and beneficiary for his large life insurance policies.

At 11 o'clock there will be further argument on the motion of the four defendants charged with the murder of Camp to quash the grand jury indictments against them and on the motion to permit them to furnish bail. The four defendants are Mrs. Jennie Laura Brown, John H. Tipton, her uncle; Robert McCamish, another foster-son, and Fred B. Mills, foreman at the Brown ranch.

It is reported that if the indictments are not quashed, all four defendants will appeal to the Supreme Court for writs of habeas corpus on the allegation that they are illegally deprived of their liberty, without sufficient evidence having been adduced to prove likelihood of their guilt.

Glendale Eyes on Annexation Possibilities

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

GLENDALE, May 10.—In view of the number of projects for annexation and the consolidation of various communities in the Glendale district, the Chamber of Commerce will name a special committee of five members to make a study of and to keep in touch with the different consolidation plans that are now under consideration. Verdugo City and Montrose are both said to be in favor of closer relations with some of the adjacent cities and the committee will devote a large part of its attention to a study of conditions in these towns. The annexation of about fifteen square miles of land in the Verdugo Hills is scheduled for settlement at an early election, and Casa Verdugo, to the north of Glendale, is also considering the question of becoming a part of Glendale in the near future.

GIRL IN HER FLIVER MOWS FIRE HYDRANT

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

MONROVIA, May 10.—Local police and firemen are thankful that Miss Carolina Baugham of this city was not traveling twenty-five miles per hour when she drove up Myrtle avenue at 8:30 this morning in a Ford touring car. What happened is a mystery, she told police, but her car suddenly leaped the curb and mowed down an iron light post and a fire hydrant. A fifteen-foot geyser sprang out of the ground and played for more than an hour before it could be capped with another fire plug.

The car lost both right wheels, but the driver was not injured. She told police she was traveling ten miles per hour.

ANDERSON FREED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, May 10.—C. C. Anderson, local restaurant man arrested on April 23 on a charge of issuing checks without funds to cover, was discharged for lack of evidence when his case came before Judge P. G. McIver. It was shown that at the time he wrote the check there was sufficient money in the bank to cover. Anderson has been in jail in default of $500 bond since his arrest.

PRUNE AND APRICOT GROWERS PROTEST

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANFORD, May 10.—The Prune and Apricot Growers' Association of this State met with severe condemnation at a meeting of Kings county growers of these fruits. This county is one of the heaviest producers of apricots in the State. In resolutions adopted, the immediate resignation of the present manager of the association was demanded, also that a new directorate be elected eliminating all directors responsible for the present state of affairs, and that the association reorganize on plans similar to other big California co-operatives.

RANCHER'S EYEBALL SLASHED IN FIGHT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OROSI, May 10.—L. J. Gilliam, rancher of this section and master of the Pomona Grange of Tulare county, is in a Fresno sanatorium suffering from a severely lacerated eyeball and a gash on his temple, said to be result of a neighborhood fight with John Hanson. Gilliam declared that he piled brush along a ditch bank dividing his property and Hanson's, intending to burn it later. Hanson is said to have objected to unsightliness of the brush. Gilliam's eyeball is declared to have been cut open and an operation may be performed in an effort to save the sight.

WELL PROMISES BRIGHT FUTURE

Cheesman No. 1 is Important Extension

Test Between Goodale and Producing Area

Sand Drilled Into at 1960 Foot Level

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ARTESIA (N. M.) May 10.—One of the most important extensions to the Eddy county field is the Dale C. Cheesman No. 1 well in the center of Section No. 35, 18-28, which looks as though it will make a good producer. This test is between the Goodale test and the present producing area, being approximately two miles south and east of the big Twin Lakes and Maljamar producers. Following a bad fishing job the sand was drilled into at 1960 feet and from all indications the well will soon be in.

Another extension to the field is the Flynn, Welch & Yates No. 1 on the Dunn permit on Section No. 10, 18-28. The sand was but at 2230 feet and considerable oil is coming from that depth. The well will probably make a good producer around the 2300-foot depth. The Dunn well is northeast of the present producing area and will mean an extensive drilling campaign in that direction.

Considerable excitement prevails here as a result of several recent field extensions, chief of which is the W. C. Wells No. 1 in the center of Section No. 19, 29-30. This well is fifteen miles southeast of the proven area. Tanks have been hauled to the lease and the well will be drilled to completion during the coming week. The oil in this test is of low gravity and geologists are of the opinion that good production of a high gravity crude will be obtained at a lower depth.

Another well to reach the sand is the Flynn, Welch, Yates, No. 11, located on Section No. 19, 18-28, this being a south offset to the Royal Dutch No. 1 producer.

Fishing jobs on a number of other wells close to the sand have delayed completion.

MUCH ORE IS IN SIGHT AT SIGNAL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) May 10.—Pay ore for the next twenty years is declared to be in sight on the property of the Signal Mines Company, operating a part of the famous old McCracken mine, seven miles from Signal and about fifty miles southeast of Kingman. Water is pumped from Signal up a rise of 1600 feet. A 100-ton mill, built at the 600-foot shaft, is shipping twelve tons of concentrate a day. Both table concentration and oil flotation are used, each making savings from certain metallic substances. Heavy galena especially is better handled on the tables, by means of which a further saving of 15 per cent lately was secured. The McCracken is credited with having produced $4,000,000 from ore that ran from sixty to 1500 ounces silver to the ton. Early-day mill processes appear to have been efficient, the old tailings sampling only about six ounces silver. Concentrates shipped now are sampling from 40 to 60 per cent lead, seventy to 100 ounces silver, and a small amount of gold. Shipment is from Yucca station.

The American Lead-Silver Mines Company has taken over the Pittsburgh group, twenty-five miles east of Yucca, a property equipped with a 200-ton ball crushing mill with concentration tables, and an electric power generation plant. The main shaft, 400 feet deep, was not driven down to the ore body, which has been developed mainly by means of a 200-foot incline shaft. The ore is reported to carry good lead-silver values.

A vein of commercial ore, three feet wide, has been cut in the United Republic in an east drift on the 200 level, after passing through a faulted zone. A drift will be driven along the new strike.

Continuation of Activity in Kern Field Indicated

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, May 10.—The continuance of heavy drilling operations by the Pacific Oil Company in the Midway oil fields throughout the summer months is practically assured, it is said, under present plans.

Employing more than 1000 men, the company is at present operating with a string of eight rotary drills in operation and a dozen cable drilling outfits on their holdings.

Past operations of the Pacific Oil Company have been confined to cable drilling in the areas of Buena Vista and Elk Hills.

The fourth well of the Marland Oil Company, operating on the west front of the Kern River oil field, has timbers on location for a fifth rig for the drilling of a new well on the Cauley lease, Section 16, 28-27.

With a steel rig erected on Section 16 the Standard awaits the finishing touches before spudding-in operations are commenced. Another steel derrick is being erected by the Standard offsetting Section 21.

The Standard Oil Company has announced the abandonment of its No. 1 well on Section 5, 10-22, located on a lease secured from the Kern County Land Company, near the San Emidio ranch. The No. 2 well in the same locality is said to have had showings of oil.

Nineteen Ships Take 1,339,668 Barrels of Oil

Petroleum shipments from Los Angeles Harbor last week amounted to 1,339,668 barrels. These shipments were taken out by nineteen tank steamers. The combined loads totaled fewer barrels than the shipments of the preceding week, but still amounted to more than two days' flow of all the wells in the State. The exports were as follows:

PACIFIC DOMESTIC

Drilling Activity Under Way at Randsburg Property

Following a custom that is now quite universally practiced in big mining operations, the Randsburg Associated Mines, Inc., of Los Angeles, has begun exploratory work in the development of its large holdings at Randsburg in Kern county, by diamond drilling methods. In order to facilitate this work active operations at shafts Nos. 1 and 2 have been discontinued, drilling activities to be started at the bottom of No. 1 at a depth of 1111 feet, and at No. 2 at 940 feet.

In following this economical method of proving the value of its holdings the drill holes will be sunk to a depth of 800 feet from the bottom of the shafts, and it is expected to prove the existence of the downward extension of known deposits, on their dip, to levels heretofore unexplored in that section of the district.

LEASORS DEFAULT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FAIRFAX (Okla.) May 10.—Many successful bidders for oil and gas leases to Osage lands during the last two years have forfeited money made on bonus payments and executed releases. The total of these forfeits probably amounts to several hundred thousand dollars. Forfeitures came about through inability of bidders to comply with terms of the lease contracts or the failure of test wells to produce oil.

"WITCH" FINDS WATER LEAK

BY ROBERT J. PRITCHARD

The most important advance in oil well mechanics since the introduction of the use of cement in shutting off water is the way oil men characterize the "water witch," invented by F. W. Huber of Riverside, oil well technician. The apparatus, operating through the application of electricity, is credited by its inventor and by prominent operators with solving the problem of how to determine the source of water in an oil well, thereby simplifying the complementary problem of shutting it off.

As expressed by Paul Paine, former vice-president and director of the Shell company of California, the principal difficulty experienced in shutting off encroaching water in a well, is the question of locating the point where the water is coming from. It may come from below the shoe, or through the shoe, due to faulty cementing, or through a leak in the casing. Much time and expense have been necessary in the past, to test these various possibilities, and very often the result of these tests has been inconclusive. By means of the water witch, according to oil men who have watched the apparatus work, the point of water ingress can be determined exactly in a few hours, and sometimes in a few minutes.

REQUIRES CONDUCTIVITY

The water witch is based on the fact that clear water, without salts in solution, is a nonconductor of electricity, its conductivity increasing with the salts content. Huber, in developing his device, took into consideration the fact that all subsurface water carries salts in more or less quantity, and is therefore more or less conductive.

Taking advantage of this fact, Huber conceived the idea of filling the subject well with clear surface water of low conductivity. This is called conditioning the well, and is effected by running tubing to the bottom of the well and pumping clear water into it, until the fresh water has entirely replaced the mineralized water.

Having conditioned the well, Huber proceeds to run into the hole two electric wires, terminated by electrodes. In order to make a complete circuit and register on an indicator in the derrick-house, a spark must jump from one electrode to the other, and without a conductive medium, this connection cannot be made. The two wires are lowered into the well and, at interval readings are taken on the indicator, which registers the resistance of the fluid in the well. As the electrodes approach the point where the salty water is coming into the hole, the resistance lessens, and at the exact point of ingress, is at its lowest.

WORKS IN TESTS

The device has been tested out on between ninety and 100 wells, according to Mr. Paine, and, according to Shell officials, has resulted in the recovery of 1,000,000 barrels of oil where ordinarily a third of this recovery might be expected.

W. S. McDuffie, present vice-president in charge of field operations of the Shell company in California, has the following to say of the water witch:

"The Huber device has been used with considerable success on a number of wells operated by the Shell Company in different parts of California."

The Shell is now using the water witch in its California wells, and is introducing it in its operations in Oklahoma.

It is being handled by the Oilfield Service Company, recently incorporated in California, which will operate the device along the same lines as various oil well cementing and core drilling companies conduct their business. It is headed by Paul Paine, as president; F. W. Huber, vice-president; R. D. Elliott, formerly of the Standard Oil Company, as field manager, and John D. Hackstaff, former Mid-Continent operator, secretary.

A number of difficulties in the application of Huber's original theory have arisen and required considerable experimenting to overcome in the two years that the water witch has been in the process of perfection, according to Mr. Paine.

OIL BOTHERED

One of the first obstacles was the tendency of the electrodes on the ends of the wires to become coated with oil, insulating them, and rendering the entire apparatus inoperative. To overcome this Huber evolved a compound, which he calls "agar-agar," which has the property of being permeable to water, but impermeable to oil.

Another difficulty found in some fields, notably the Coalinga field, is the fact that the surface water and subsurface water are about equally conductive, due to the fact that they carry about an equal amount of salts. This meant that the water witch when run into the well would show about the same resistance to electricity regardless of where readings were taken. To overcome this trouble, the usual process was reversed, and the water pumped into the well to condition it was treated with calcium chloride, making more conductive than the subsurface water, so that the witch when read opposite the point of ingress of the water, showed a higher resistance than elsewhere.

An instance of the efficacy of the device cited by Mr. Paine is the Childs No. 1 well of the Shell Company in the Dominguez field. This well was brought in and showed water. The water witch was run into the well and within forty-five minutes the source of water was determined. The well was recemented accordingly and subsequently came in dry.

MEXICAN MINES HIT BY ADVERSE FACTORS

EXCESSIVE TAXATION, UNIONS' DEMANDS, CAUSE CLOSING OF PROPERTIES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MONTERREY (Mex.) May 10.—Increased taxation and union labor troubles are causing many mining companies to cease operations, at least temporarily. On top of these troubles is the forfeiture of titles to a large number of mining properties, some of them of great richness, because of failure to pay taxes promptly or other infractions of the law.

Among the larger concerns which have suspended operations on account of strikes of laborers is the Boleo Copper Company, which owns copper mines and smelter at Santa Rosalia, Lower California. It is a French company, and operates its own fleet of cargo boats between Santa Rosalia and French ports. The mines and smelter give employment to several thousand men. It is stated that the strike is the first union labor difficulty the company has experienced since it began operations many years ago.

In the El Oro, Pachuca, Santa Barbara, Guanajuato, Santa Eulalia and Parral districts mines have closed down recently on account of excessive demands of laborers or burdensome taxation. It is stated that many mining companies will be unable to continue operations under the new income tax law for the reason that they are already taxed 65 per cent of their profits.

MINERAL HILL ACTIVE

Ajax Property Sold; Has Twenty Feet of Ore Body

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FLORENCE (Ariz.) May 10.—Activity again is noted in the old Mineral Hill district, northeast of Florence. The Ajax property has been sold to a Hurley, (N. M.) company for $40,000. It is well developed, with a twenty-foot ore body opened from the bottom of a 200-foot shaft.

Across a face of twenty feet, the ore is said to sample 17 per cent lead, 17 per cent zinc and 17 ounces silver, beside several dollars in gold. Samples from the near-by Selman property are reported to run from 69 to 92 per cent lead, in galena, and up to 40 ounces silver. Ore shipments now are being made from the Selman, under a lease taken by Frank Innes.

TWO WELLS PLANNED

Contracts to Drill on Permits at Devil's Den Let

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, May 10.—Two oil drilling contracts relating to prospecting under government permits in the region southwest of Devil's Den have been granted F. Alien Morgan and Lucie M. Mambourne by Robert Barry.

The first contract specifies the south half of the northeast quarter of Section 34, 26-18 covering an area of approximately twenty acres. This is a portion of more extensive holdings granted under government prospecting grants. In the event that oil is produced in paying quantities the owner is to receive 16 2-3 per cent of the oil at storage.

As part of the celebration of the centenary of the opening of the first railway line, The London and Northeastern Railway will run a procession of early engines and coaches, led by Stephenson's No. 1 locomotive.

INITIAL TEST IN FIELD PRODUCES

Well Near Farmington, N. M., is 628 Feet Deep

Forty Barrels of High Grade Reported as Output

Company to Carry Next Hole to Deeper Sands

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FARMINGTON (N.M.) May 10. At a depth of 628 feet, the shallowest well and the best producer in the Bloomfield district was brought in Saturday by the Gibson Oil Corporation. This is its No. 1 well, ten miles east of Farmington. The well was drilled with a new National rig and was put down to production in one week's drilling.

The Gibson Oil Corporation is a New York organization with F. D. Gibson as its manager. It decided to enter the New Mexico field about two months ago, and Mr. Gibson came out from New York and went over the producing sections as well as some sections where wildcatting is going on. He decided that the Bloomfield district was the most promising for early production, so a rig and casing was shipped in, a good selection of acreage was obtained and the drill started a little over a week ago.

DEEPER TEST PLANNED

It is significant that his first well was a producer of the same high-grade oil that has characterized all the other wells of the Farmington section. The rig will be moved one location away from well No. 1 and another well will be put down at once. The intention is to drill this next well down to the Picture Cliff sand. In fact, this was the intention in No. 1, but the production of such high-grade oil at so shallow a depth and in such quantity—about 40 barrels—looked so attractive that it was decided to complete it.

The Gibson outfit has a large acreage in New Mexico, the most of it being in the San Juan Basin. The Coal Creek Oil Company's well No. 2 is down 460 feet, while well No. 1 is still flowing by heads under gas pressure. These wells are located a half-mile west of Gibson No. 1 and are higher on the surface elevation, so the oil sand is struck at about 680 feet. Mr. Vigliotti, the manager of this company, returned this week from a visit to Detroit.

PIPE LINE TALK REVIVED

The bringing in of two new wells in the Bloomfield district the past week and the indication that at least two more will be brought in this week, revives the talk of a pipe line from the Bloomfield section to the Farmington refinery. It is not likely that this will be started until the Gibson test of the Picture Cliff sands is made, as the size of the pipe line would be determined largely by the production of the six other sands that are believed to have producing capacity below the one that is now producing the oil there.

The Rainbow Oil Corporation is a new organization that is entering this field. It is composed of Gallup and Los Angeles investors and operators and intends to drill in the Ute Pasture and the Bloomfield sections. It already has one rig going in the Ute Pasture and has had showings of both oil and gas since the seventy-foot depth. At 100 feet the gas flow was sufficient to be lighted. This is the shallowest depth yet found for gas and oil showings.

The company is capitalized for $1,000,000 with W. R. Childers of Gallup at president, R. W. Jackson of Fullerton, Calif., vice-president; and John W. Dowdle of Los Angeles, fiscal agent. D. N. Childers, also of Los Angeles, is secretary. The company has another rig at Gallup that will be brought over at once and started to drilling on its acreage near Farmington. R. N. Jackson, D. N. Childers and John W. Dowdle came in this week from California and were highly pleased with the progress being made. The well drilling in the Ute Pasture is located about twenty-two miles northwest of Farmington, on the Ute Reservation.

The Gypsy Oil Company, which resumed operations about the first of April after closing down in December because of water pipes freezing, has pulled the casing which did not completely shut out the water and this week began running a new line in the well twenty miles northwest of Farmington, which is 2920 feet deep.

Tampico Field Active in First Months of Year

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TAMPICO (Mex.) May 10.—Compilations for the first quarter of 1925, just announced officially, show that 214 wells were completed in the Tampico district, seventy-seven of which were producers, with combined initial production of 225,265 barrels daily. Sixty-seven of the successful completions were in the heavy oil district, the production total being 151,000 barrels a day.

In the southern, or light, oil district, ten completions were good for 74,290 barrels, half of which were drilled by the Huasteca Petroleum Company, at an estimated production of 72,000 barrels a day. In the northern field the same interests, drilling under the name of the Mexican Petroleum Company, secured six producers for estimated production of 17,600 barrels a day.

The Mexican Gulf, which has had rather bad luck this year, seems to have broken the spell at last. Within the last week it has completed a 10,000-barrel producer at the remarkably shallow depth of 1640 feet, in the Corcovado field. This is the biggest well of the week and opens up another important addition to the Cacalilao area, being fifteen kilometers from Cacalilao, of which Corcovado is an extension. The Transcontinental completed a 2000-barrel well in Paciencia.

NEW WELL IN AT ROSECRANS

Flowing at Rate of 2800 Barrels a Day

Work Suspended on Several Holes in Athens Area

Marine's No. 42 Expected to Shut Down

A new well coming in at 2800 barrels a day and continuing to flow at the rate of 2500 barrels was the principal development in the Rosecrans field during the past week. The well was H. W. Fisher's No. 9, while is located in the Athens area. Fisher's No. 10 well is expected to go on production hourly, at approximately the same depth as No. 9, which was completed at 4478 feet.

Several wells in the Athens area have been suspended as a result of poor indications, according to field reports. The Marine Corporation and the Petroleum Midway Company each has shut down two wells, and others may follow, it is asserted.

The Marine's No. 35 and No. 40 have been shut down, the former at more than 5100 feet. The Marine No. 42 is also expected to shut down in the next few days unless something encouraging is found. This company is preparing to kill its No. 34 well which is making 550 barrels a day, in order to deepen it in the hope of getting production something like Fisher's No. 9 well which is only a short distance north.

The Petroleum Midway Company has suspended operations on its McCormick, Baskin, and Ducommon wells because of lack of showings. This company has not had the best of luck in Athens, having brought in only one of five projects—its Kreits No. 1, which is making only about 120 barrels of oil, and a large volume of comparatively dry gas.

Huntington Beach Field Recompletion Results in 380-Barrel Gain

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HUNTINGTON BEACH, May 10. One completion and a recompletion sums up the success of field work here last week. The recompletion is perhaps most worthy of note, it being the Huntington Signal Oil Company's Hand No. 2, which was originally brought in at the rate of 100 barrels a day.

The company recently undertook to clean it out, hoping to get a better production from it. An air lift was installed, and when the well went back on the production list, it registered 480 barrels a day. High-pressure gas is being used to make the well flow.

The Petroleum Midway Company completed its Thornton No. 3, which was drilled to a depth of 1606 feet a year ago. The completion depth was 3510 feet. With 525 feet of screen casing in the hole the well is now yielding 150 barrels of oil a day.

The Sun Oil Company is building a rig on the north side of Torrance and near Delaware avenue on a five-acre tract and will drill a well at once, it being an offset to the Globe Petroleum Dabney No. 4 on the north and Gypsy No. 5 on the south.

The Standard Oil Company's Paularino is rotating along at 3260 feet in a very hard formation with nothing showing to cause any predictions one way or the other, although real estate is reported to have more than doubled in price since the beginning of this test.

INGLEWOOD BIDS FOR LEAD

Daily Production Mounts, Promising to Pass That of Athens and Rosecrans Fields

Production in the Inglewood field, the newest producing area in the Los Angeles basin, is likely to exceed production in the Rosecrans field within a month, unless the Rosecrans and Athens district undergo a radical reversal of form, in the opinion of many operators.

The Inglewood field has approximately twenty wells that are certain of production, so far as certainties go in the oil business, before the end of May, while the Athens district has about the same number of wells that are subject to about as many vicissitudes as have been discovered in the most uncertain of industries.

Production in the Inglewood field at present is about 6000 barrels a day, most of the producing wells being located in the less prolific areas of the field. In addition to this, the principal development of the field is now in the area where the best production is expected, and where several wells have been completed at nearly 1000 barrels a day, and one or two at even higher rates of output than this. Most of the operators expect Inglewood's daily production to mount to between 15,000 and 20,000 barrels a day within the next few weeks.

The Associated Oil Company's Vickers No. 3 provided the sensation of the week by increasing its production from an initial rate of about 1000 to more than 2000 barrels, according to reports. On Thursday the well is said to have made 2040 barrels, with pressure of 150 pounds on the tubing, and 375 pounds on the casing.

The Standard Oil Company has about ten wells on its Vickers and Los Angeles Investment leases, which are due for completion before June 1. The Associated Oil Company has seven wells, the Petroleum Securities Company has six, and the Petroleum Midway Company has three wells, all due for completion within the next three weeks.

BOND PRICES HIT NEW PEAK

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, May 10.—Bond prices rose to new 1925 high levels last week, in many respects the most progressive of the year in the bond market. The prevailing ease of money rates stimulated trading in all sections of the list, bringing a marked expansion in the volume of business and resulting in general advances of one to ten points or more.

At the same time the investment market showed unmistakable signs of vitality. New financing expanded to a total of approximately $130,000,000, contrasted with $26,000,000 in the preceding week. The keen demand for high-grade securities was gauged by the sale of a $60,000,000 4 1-4 per cent New York City loan which brought the highest price paid for such an issue in sixteen years and netted the city a cash premium of more than $1,000,000. Corporation issues were quickly subscribed and high-rating railroad bonds were placed without recourse to a public offering.

COMPETITION PREDICTED

Financial authorities, attempting to estimate the effects of Great Britain's return to the gold standard, agreed that one of the net results would be to develop more active competition between London and Wall street for foreign loans. For the present, it was said, England is more concerned with insuring the success of the gold-resumption policy and protecting sterling exchange, but once its stability has been fully restored London is expected to reach out for new business.

In the long run, the trend of money rates is expected to determine the placement of foreign loans, and in this respect American bankers believe they will have an advantage which will offset Great Britain's long-established prewar supremacy in international financing.

BRITISH BUYING FALLS OFF

One of the developments noted last week was a marked decrease in the British buying of bonds in market. Although there were no this market. Although there was no official prohibition against purchasing here, English investors were understood to be withholding business from New York in line with the Bank of England's desire to check the export of capital for a time following the return to a gold basis.

Heavy accumulation of Japanese government obligations, which mounted to new peak prices for the year, was accompanied by unconfirmed reports that the American market was being prepared for additional Japanese financing. Bankers denied, however, that negotiations were pending for a Tokio loan. Other foreign issues displayed a firm tone.

ACTIVITY IS EVIDENCED AT MAYER

Development is Started on Miner and Big Bug Mine Groups

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) May 10.—Much activity is shown in the mines of the Mayer section. Development has been started on the Miner and Big Bug groups in Copper Mountain district.

A. S. Parr of Redlands is in charge of both, representing a syndicate comprising L. J. Soper and I. T. A. Lewis of Los Angeles; Mr. Parr, J. Howland, H. O. Smith, H. B. Putnam, E. G. Gustafson and F. K. Ligday of Redlands, and Burrel Collins of Kansas City. The last named is a heavy stockholder in the Tigre mine, in Northern Sonora.

A road is being built to the Miner shaft, which is to be deepened as soon as new surface equipment has been installed. On hand, ready for shipment to the Humboldt smelter, is a carload of ore sampling above 17 per cent copper and with material gold value.

The shaft of the Verde Mines and Milling Company, south of Jerome, at 250 feet of depth is reported wholly bottomed in ore. The body is a new one, said to assay well in gold and silver. A station is being cut for drifting on the ledge.

The Southwestern Engineering Company of Los Angeles has completed a survey of the United States Navy property in Copper Basin district. This has been done to determine the ore supply and its quality, in preparation for possible installation of reduction works by the operating company, a Rhode Island corporation. The mine is developed to the depth of 540 feet, with exposure of much silver-lead ore. On the 450 level has been cut a four-foot ledge of solid galena.

San Luis Potosi Smelter Plant to be Enlarged

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN LUIS POTOSI (Mex.) May 10.—Important improvements are being made to the smelter here of the American Smelting and Refining Company. The capacity of the plant will be increased to take care of customs ores which formerly went to the company's smelter at Aguascalientes. Of the 1000 men who were employed in the Aguascalientes smelter, now closed down, about one-half will be transferred to the plant at San Luis Potosi, it is reported.

During the last few years the shortage of copper and lead ores in the territory tributary to the smelter at Aguascalientes became more and more acute until the scarcity caused the company to suspend operation of the plant. The smelters of the American Smelting and Refining Company at Asarco and Chihuahua are now in full operation, although some of the larger mines in their respective districts have been forced to close down recently.

Important Deal Reported From Artesia Field

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ARTESIA (N. M.) May 9.—Among the many acreage deals closed during the week, the purchase by the Ohio Oil Company of the Toomey-Allen holdings is of the greatest importance. This deal covered 360 acres all in the proven area of the Eddy county field. One lease consisting of 160 acres is the southeast quarter of Section 28, 18-28, adjoining the lease of the Twin Lakes Oil Company, owned by William Mitchell, New York financier.

The remaining acreage consists of five forty-acre tracts, checkerboarded around the producing area. This acreage is reported to carry a one-twelfth over-riding royalty. This is all State acreage, carrying the regular one-eighth royalty to the State.

Due to the many supply depots and machine shops now in this city, the Santa Fe is now engaged in laying additional switches. Building is also on the boom, many new business houses, apartments and residences being under construction.

EXPERIMENT WATCHED

Interest Expressed in Search for Cheaper Smelting Process

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) May 10.—Keen interest is expressed concerning the efforts of A. G. McGregor to find a cheaper method for efficient smelting of sulphuretic copper ores.

Mr. McGregor has high rank as a mining process engineer, while the local Calumet and Arizona reduction plant has been a pioneer in the installation of economical smelting processes, as well as in the production of sulphuric acid from waste roaster gases.

It is understood that the new idea seeks elimination of the roasters and full reduction of the ores by utilization of the heat within the sulphur units. The process is said to be almost automatic, with consequent saving of labor costs.

CHAMBER OF MINES AIDS SMALL OWNERS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TUCSON (Ariz.) May 10.—The new Chamber of Mines has started activity in helping small mine owners to dispose of less than carload ore shipments and will aid in the marketing of a carload of ore from several development properties in the Empire district.

ARIZONA LEADS ALL IN BULLION PRODUCTION

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BISBEE (Ariz.) May 10.—According to figures compiled by Manager G. H. Dowell of the Copper Queen, Arizona led all other States in bullion production last year. The ten western and coast States produced 85 per cent of the copper and 50 per cent of the lead, with gross valuation of $325,000,000. Of this sum, Arizona is credited with $98,216,000, Utah $65,609,000, Montana $54,228,000, Idaho $27,910,000 Nevada $23,800,000, California $22,639,000, Colorado $18,449,000, New Mexico $12,434, Washington $895,000 and Oregon $665,000.

ANCIENT PLAYING CARDS

A collection of eighteen varieties of playing cards was recently shown in London, where they were viewed with much interest. The earliest pack is of the thirteenth century. It has crude fanciful figures etched on thin plates of horn, backed with paper. Several packs dated between 1714-1765, are known as geography packs. They have complicated maps or much information on foreign countries. The 1780 cards are adorned with sketches showing incidents in various fables with verses. There is a natural history pack, one dealing with astronomy, and one with words and music. The more modern pack, the simpler the design. A playing card expert suggests that the decline in adornment was due to modern brains being more active than those of old. "Three hundred years ago people's brains worked much slower than they do now," he says. "Consequently card games took longer, and it was natural that there should be some interesting matter for players to read. The speed of card playing has undoubtedly increased tremendously."—[Exchange.

RAIL TRAIN STRAYS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, May 10.—It is seldom that a railroad train gets lost, but one leaving Cannon-street station for Chislehurst, a twelve-mile journey, proceeded sixty miles in a roundabout way, reaching its destination two hours late.

Officials of the road have been unable to explain how the train happened to leave its scheduled route and make a jaunt about the countryside.

ESKIMOS WEAR OUT THEIR TEETH EARLY

Regarding the mentality of the Eskimo, the explorer, Rasmussen says: "Their culture is much higher than is commonly supposed. Their capacity is such that, if you take an Eskimo baby and rear him in New York, giving him an average education, he would equal the average man. That has been demonstrated in a number of cases. But if you take your civilized Eskimo back to his tribe, he will speedily pick up their language and their ways and soon be like the rest of them."

The explorer said that, while free from disease and not subject to bacterial attacks of any kind, the Eskimo aged several years sooner than the average white man.

"I attribute this to the hardships and rigors of their life," he said, "and also to the fact that their teeth, being in continual use as tools, are worn down to the stumps at middle age and they are unable to masticate their food properly any longer. They use their teeth in most of their manufactures. They use them in treating sinews for bows and in preparing leather for their shoes and softening caribou and sealskins for clothes.

"As soon as the Eskimos leave their ordinary life and become trappers, they begin to import flour as their only food. Continuous meals of hot cakes are not good for them. Their ordinary diet—meat and fish only—seems to be good for them. The only vegetable food they ever have comes from the stomachs of the reindeers. As soon as they kill them, they open the stomachs for the vegetable food they contain. That does not sound inviting to a man in the midst of the luxuries of civilization, but I assure you that it is very good indeed and that if you lived there a little while you would like it yourself."—[Exchange.

GRAIN STRENGTH BETTERS TRADE

Cheerful Tone Follows Gold Standard in England

Operations in Steel Industry Are Slackening

Merger Prospect Brightens Rail Outlook

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, May 10.—Trade movements last week still moved uniformly but general business sentiment was distinctly more cheerful. This improvement was ascribed partially to the strength manifested in the securities and grain markets and to the widespread feeling of satisfaction which was engendered by Great Britain's return to the gold standard.

While it was too early to expect any tangible results of England's policy to appear, economists asserted there could be little doubt of the ultimate favorable effect of having $35,000,000,000 out of a total world trade of $45,000,000,000 placed safely on a gold basis. Some fears were expressed that Britain would find it difficult to maintain the gold standard in the face of last year's adverse trade balance of almost a billion and a half dollars, but financial authorities argued that sound currency in itself would act as a strong corrective of an unfavorable trade balance.

The domestic trade picture last week was spotted with contrasting areas of improvement and reaction. The predominant note in the basic industries was one of unsettlement due to the backward tendency of prices and the failure of a seasonal revival in business to develop.

The slackening pace of operations was perhaps most pronounced in the steel industry, with the mills working at barely 70 per cent of capacity, a further contraction in output reported and prices again shaded. Although the United States Steel Corporation announced a reduction of 416,996 tons in unfilled orders at the end of April, Chairman E. H. Gary after an inspection trip of the company's properties, said he found many of them in full swing. Temporary sessions, he added, were not at all surprising, and general business throughout the country was strong, healthy and vigorous, and might be expected so to continue.

The maintenance of freight traffic late in April around the year's best levels did much to offset the less favorable March earnings statement of the combined class 1 carriers. This showed net operating income of $73,116,672, or $7,203,375 below the corresponding month last year. The most encouraging features of the railroad outlook were the prospects for progress in merger developments.

Gasoline prices were lowered in New York City and several other points in the East, following several weeks of steadily expanding crude oil production. Despite the lower level of prices, however, most of the larger companies have been able to report substantial profits. Textile conditions remained unsatisfactory with the woolen markets unsettled, both at home and abroad, and a further curtailment reported in cotton goods manufacturing activities.

GOLDFISH FARM ON PLAINS OF KANSAS

GRANGER CONSTRUCTS ARTIFICIAL PONDS, BREEDS THEM IN LAKES

Thousands of goldfish that find their way into the markets of this country are each year raised on the plains of Central Kansas. The man who is performing this cultural feat is Eugene Catte, whose farm is near Langdon.

Catte came into the region when the country was new in every sense of the word, about thirty-five years ago. He selected land that most men considered rather unpromising. The soil was somewhat sandy, and winding through the place was a spring-fed creek that flowed perennially, its valley using up a good many acres and rendering them unsuited to the growing of ordinary crops.

He had not been on the place very long until he started to make use of the creek, constructing artificial ponds in the valley and throwing up dams and dikes to confine the water in a series of small lakes. When one pond was completed it was immediately stocked with fish, and immediately there began on the Catte farm a business of breeding the finny tribe just as other farmers breed horses, cattle, chickens and similar land-inhabiting members of the animal kingdom.

About fifteen years ago Catte began the cultivation of goldfish. After a time the part that had to do with the game fish lost favor in his eyes because it was at once too expensive to conduct and too exacting in the time required.—[Topeka Capital.

THE WILL TO CONQUER

A friend of the late Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil plutarch who did so much for the development of Florida by constructing railroads, building hotels, etc., tells me this incident which throws light on the manner of man Flagler was. This friend was chatting with Flagler when a telegram was handed him. He read it and handed it to his friends. It was from St. Augustine, where Flagler had built his monumental Ponce de Leon Hotel. It read, "Hotel empty except for band playing at one end. What shall I do?" The manager was wondering whether he should pay off the band. What did Flagler reply? "Engage another band at the other end."

Flagler, like most of the stalwarts John D. Rockefeller gathered around him in his early days, had foresight and the courage of his convictions.—(Forbes Magazine.

SELLING HEAVY IN COSTA MESA

Long Beach, Los Angeles Men Handle Majority

Outright Purchase is Made in Most Cases

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEWPORT BEACH, May 10.—More than $200,000 worth of leases on oil lands have changed hands in the Costa Mesa district within the last few days, practically all the sales being made by Long Beach and Los Angeles oil operators.

While bonuses are still being paid for leases, most of the deals are outright purchases of the land, in many cases all cash being paid. Land values have jumped from $1000 to $3000 an acre.

Reports that the Wilshire Oil Company has entered the field and that the Dabney interests of Long Beach, in addition to a Coalinga oil company, are seeking leases, are current in the field.

One of the large transactions of the week was the sale of twelve and one-half acres at the corner of Wilson street and Santa Ana Road by Miss Kathryn MacKenzie to a group of Orange business men. The consideration is said to have been about $40,000.

W. D. Barnard reports the sale of five acres on Victoria street for $12,000, while Jacobsen & Willingham state that they have sold the old school site for $10,000.

The Interstate Oil Company's No. 2 continues to pump steadily at the rate of seventy barrels daily, while the No. 1 has not yet completed its water shutoff. New wells are being drilled now in all portions of the field.

Aside from the lease excitement the interest of oil operators has shifted to the unique oil mine of the Newport Petroleum Company, which, after many months of trials and tribulation, has finally reached the oil sand, according to Tom Sharkey, field superintendent of the company. The incline is down 485 feet, with a vertical depth of 240 feet. Gas is forcing slower progress, the miners being compelled to come to the surface when the air line stops, because of poisonous gases.

Sand saturated with oil was taken from the mine yesterday and it is believed by Mr. Sharkey that the miners are on the top shale of the sand. The sand in an old well which was abandoned was eleven feet thick. The present plan is to heat the oil with steam pipes and bring it up by means of an endless chain of buckets. It is said that from 500 to 1000 barrels daily could be handled in this manner.

HERMIT INDIAN TRIBE

In a sheltered archipelago off the coast of Panama lives the hermit tribe of San Blas Indians. There are about 20,000 of them in all. For centuries these Indians have lived in their boats, with the result that the present generation is short, averaging about five feet in height, have very small thin legs and huge arms and shoulders.

They are one of the purest tribes in the world. There is no strain among them, of Spaniard or black or white. Traders are permitted to visit the islands during the daytime. When night comes down, every alien must go back to his ship, and during the day when strangers are ashore the Indian women keep to their bamboo houses, that the eyes of the foreigners may not rest upon them. The women are forbidden, under pain of death, to leave the islands. The men occasionally sell their dugout canoes to Colon to trade and an adventurous few sometimes get on ships—but the women stay at home.—[The Mentor Magazine.

THE PERFECT EXCUSE

The prize excuse was introduced in a court during the recent trial of a wife-beating case. The offender had administered brutal punishment, and the victim appeared swathed in bandages.

During the hearing it developed that a neighbor was present at the affray, and subsequently became a witness for the prosecution. He described the blows in detail and the wife's helplessness.

In astonishment the judge turned to the witness and asked:

"Do you mean the court to understand that you stood by and saw this man strike down the poor woman again and again?"

"Yes, your honor I saw it all."

"And you made no effort to interfere?"

"I couldn't your honor."

"Why not?" thundered the judge.

LIGHT OIL AT COSTA MESA

Interstate's No. 1 Well Reported to Have Hit Flow

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEWPORT BEACH, May 10.—It was reported yesterday that light oil has been found in the No. 1 well of the Interstate Oil Company, at Costa Mesa. The hole was cemented off at 1400 feet, and after being drilled out it showed considerable light oil coming up in the bailer, field reports say.

This hole was plugged back from 2600 feet, and is expected to go on production within a few days. The oil is said to be much lighter than that which is being taken from Interstate No. 2, but no gravity test of it has yet been made.

Indiana Murder Laid to Revenge by Gunmen Gang

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, May 10.—Crown Point, Ind., found one of its citizens, Frank Cochran, murdered today and at once suspicion was directed against Chicago gunmen. This, because Cochran was the only witness able to identify the murderers of Attorney Thad S. Fancher a year ago in a roadhouse near Crown Point.

Cochran had testified against John O'Malley, who was given a life sentence, and against Alex McCabe, who was convicted, but who has motion for a new trial pending. There were others wanted for the Fancher murder and Sheriff Benjamin Strong of Lake county named Frank McErlane, Thomas Hoban and Edward Fitzgerald, the entire five well known in Chicago's gun circles.

Chief of Detectives Schoemaker in Chicago agreed that Sheriff Strong probably had named the right men. It's their way of doing business, he said, when he learned the details. The style and technique of the Cochran murder are peculiarly associated with Chicago's own brand of first-class gunmen, he declared.

Cochran's body was found shortly before midnight Friday. His head had been crushed in as if by an ax.

Aged Jazz Fan Wills Estate to Band Director

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PEORIA (Ill.) May 10.—Because the only pleasure she says she ever had in her life came from hearing her first jazz band, Mrs. Salina Tinton, 91 years of age, and for almost a quarter of a century a recluse near here, has made Paul Ash, the famous jazz symphony bandsman, whom she has never seen, the sole heir to her estate of almost $16,500 in Liberty Bonds and property near Olathe, Kan., said to be worth $50,000.

A friend brought a portable radio set to her cabin and she heard Ash from a Chicago radio station. A few days later she died and on her death bed she directed, since she had no relatives, her estate go to the only source of happiness she ever had.

Hight, ex-pastor of the Ina Methodist Episcopal Church, of the murder of Wilfred Sweetin, the woman's husband, announces that sufficient funds are assured to carry the appeal from the Jefferson County Circuit Court to the Illinois Supreme Court. Hight was given a life sentence and Mrs. Sweetin thirty-five years. The work of making up the record will soon begin. Smith receives from one to twenty letters a day from practically every State in the Union regarding Mrs. Sweetin. The money for the appeal is made up of voluntary subscriptions.

DEL DEPARTAMENTO ESPAÑOL DE "THE TIMES"
Número 326

En la primera línea del cuarto párrafo de la Plática 324, dice "pestas" por "pesetas", y en el último párrafo de la misma dice "floras" por "flores". En el primer párrafo de la Plática 325 dice "Paraso" por "Paraíso".

Al comenzar su artículo nos dice Miguel de Zárraga (Plática 324) que "se ha matriculado este año un millón de estudiantes en las escuelas públicas de la ciudad de Nueva York". "Matricularse" quiere aquí decir, "hacer uno que inscriban su nombre en la matrícula (roll) de una escuela". Esa frase se traduciría al inglés por: "a million students have matriculated or enrolled this year in the public schools of New York City".

En lenguaje marítimo, "matrícula de buques" es el registro que se lleva en las oficinas de las capitanías de puerto (port captain offices), en el que constan los dueños, clases, portes (burdens), dimensiones, etc., de las embarcaciones mercantes (merchant craft) correspondientes a cada una de esas capitanías. En este sentido, la voz "matrícula" se vierte en inglés por "register".

En los Estados Unidos, los barcos mercantes que se dedican al comercio exterior, se registran en la oficina del administrador de la aduana (office of the collector of customs) de su puerto domiciliario (home port). La oración, "El vapor 'Elena' es de la matrícula de Sevilla", la traduciríamos así: "The steamer 'Elena' is registered in Seville".

En la actualidad se aplica también el nombre de "matrícula" a la chapa metálica que llevan los automóviles, con un número y el nombre de la provincia donde están registrados o matriculados y donde pagan sus dueños las contribuciones correspondientes; y así se dice que "tal automóvil es de la matrícula de Castellón, y cual de la de Pontevedra".

"Se ha matriculado este año un millón de estudiantes", dice Zárraga, y yo, sin negar que sea lícito concordar el verbo con el colectivo singular "millón", prefiero hacerlo concertar en este caso con el plural "estudiantes", y decir "Se han matriculado un millón de estudiantes", como se dice en inglés, "a million students have enrolled", porque la frase denota claramente la pluralidad de actos de matriculación.

Esto no quiere decir que se sigan en español las mismas reglas que en inglés para la concordancia de los verbos con nominativos colectivos. En inglés se pone en plural el verbo cuyo sujeto sea un colectivo en singular, siempre que éste, a pesar de su forma singular, entrañe la idea de pluralidad. En cambio, si el mismo colectivo denotare unidad, masa, conjunto, el verbo de que sea sujeto y los pronombres de que sea antecedente irán en singular. Ejemplos:

I. Idea de Pluralidad. "The council WERE unanimous"; "The committee ARE in consultation"; "The jury WERE unable to agree"; "The meeting HAVE shown THEIR discretion"; "The society HAVE settled THEIR dispute"; "The flock ARE widely scattered".

II. Idea de Unidad o Conjunto. "When a legislative body MAKES laws, IT ACTS for ITSELF only; but when IT MAKES grants or contracts, IT ACTS as a party" ("Webster's Essays", p. 40); "His army WAS defeated"; "A jury WAS anciently called 'homagium'".

Número 327

En español, sólo en ciertos casos de silepsis, que es breve mencionaremos, es lícito poner en plural un verbo cuyo nominativo colectivo esté en singular. Por lo tanto, las oraciones inglesas de la Plática anterior piden todas inflexión verbal singular al traducirse al español: "El concejo estuvo unánime"; "La comisión está en consulta"; "El jurado no pudo llegar a un acuerdo"; "El mitin demostró su discreción"; "La sociedad ha dirimido sus diferencias"; "El rebaño anda muy disperso", etc.

Empero, por silepsis, que es la figura de sintaxis en virtud de la cual las palabras concuerdan según su significado y no según sus accidentes gramaticales, pueden algunas veces los colectivos de número singular concertar con un adjetivo o verbo en plural. Para ello, dice Bello, se necesita que concurran dos requisitos: que el colectivo signifique colección de personas o cosas de especie indeterminada, como "número", "multitud", "infinidad", "gente", "pueblo", y que el adjetivo o verbo no forme una misma proposición con el colectivo; es decir, que el colectivo esté en un miembro del período y el adjetivo o verbo en otro.

Faltaría, por ejemplo, el primer requisito, si se dijera: "Habiendo llegado el regimiento a deshora, se QUEDARON sin alojamiento"; porque "regimiento" significa colección de personas de especie indeterminada, es a saber, de soldados. Hay, pues, que decir "se QUEDÓ sin alojamiento".

Por falta del segundo requisito no sería permitido decir: "El pueblo amotinados", "La gente huyeron". Al contrario, reunidas ambas circunstancias, se diría bien: "Amotinóse la gente, pero a la primera descarga de la tropa HUYERON DESPAVORIDOS"; "La muchedumbre alborotada no sabe templarse; o TEMEN o ESPANTAN, y en todas sus cosas OBRAN desapoderamente" (Mariana). Tanto "gente" como "muchedumbre" son colectivos indeterminados (primer requisito), y uno y otro se hallan en las primeras proposiciones de las cláusulas citadas, en tanto que los verbos y adjetivos que a ellos se refieren se hallan en otras (segundo requisito).

Sin embargo, dice el señor Bello, cuando el colectiva es modificado por un complemento con "de", que tiene por término las personas o cosas de que consta el conjunto, designadas en plural, puede hacerse la concordancia en este número, aunque el adjetivo o verbo forme una misma proposición con el singular colectivo: "CUBRIAN la ciudad por aquel lado UNA ESPECIE DE FORTIFICACIONES construídas a la ligera"; "MULTITUD DE SOLDADOS ENTRARON en la ciudad"; "... APARECEN una SERIE DE CARTAS de ardentísima polémica" (Menéndez y Pelayo).

La gramática de la Academia dice, no sólo que es lícita en este caso la concordancia en plural, sino que es la más frecuente, y de allí que prefiera yo decir "Se han matriculado este año un millón de estudiantes", y no "se ha matriculado, etc." como escribió Zárraga en su artículo.

"Parte", "resto", "mitad", "tercio", y otros sustantivos semejantes, dice el señor Bello, pueden concertar con el verbo y con el adjetivo en plural: 'Agolpóse el populacho; parte venían sin armas; parte armados de puñales"; "Iban en el buque sesenta personas; la mitad perecieron".

No es forzoso, dice el señor de la Peña en su Gramática, que el colectivo singular concuerde con verbo plural cuando se verifican las condiciones de que se ha hablado en reglas anteriores; puede en este caso hallarse el verbo en el número singular. Lo comprueban los ejemplos que se ponen a continuación: "Buen número de cédulas no halló cabida en la nueva edición: pero basta que más de la mitad de ellas fuera admitida" (García Icazalceta); "Gran cúmulo de observaciones técnicas debió de recogerse" (Menéndez y Pelayo); "La mayor parte de las fechas es de una certeza absoluta" (L. Moratín).

Collet began to fear he would lose his bundle of preciousness. Finally Collet could stand his fears no longer.

CLAIMANTS REJECT DAMAGES AWARDED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BOSTON (Mass.) May 10.—Many of the plaintiffs in the 119 suits brought against the United States Industrial Alcohol Company, arising out of the collapse of a huge molasses tank on January 15, 1919, are not satisfied with the amount of damages awarded by Hugh W. Ogden who, as auditor, heard evidence in the cases, and have demanded a jury trial.

Mr. Ogden found that the alcohol company was liable for damages for the collapse of the tank, and awarded nearly $300,000 to the plaintiffs. In his report Mr. Ogden says: "To prove that the tank broke and that damage was caused by molasses was easy. To prove why it broke has been a matter of attempted inference by scientists and practically every one of the fundamental bases for decision has provoked the sharpest kind of dispute."

The defense held that a bomb explosion caused the destruction of the tank. The collapse demolished several buildings, and the quarters of the fireboat swept from its foundations and carried five or six feet toward the water. A score of persons lost their lives in the disaster.

RHINO RUNS AMUCK ON CARGO STEAMER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NORFOLK (Va.) May 10.—The crew of the American Steamer Wytheville felt all the thrill of close quarter encounter with big game when a rhinoceros smashed through his pen on the forward deck and caused a wild scramble for the rigging while the ship was unloading here.

The lumbering brute, fresh from the African wilds and bound for the Philadelphia zoo, wrecked hatch covers and everything else that came in his path while he raged about the deck for about an hour. Finally, the ship's quartermaster, crawling out on a cargo boom, managed to drop a lasso around the neck of the rhino and the boom then did the work of dragging him back to his pen.

SON TAKES RIVAL'S SIDE; STABS FATHER

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, May 10.—Maurice Jollivet, 12 years of age, plays the principal role in this domestic drama.

The Jollivets had separated and while the wife maintained the old apartment, her husband was living in a small room. Mrs. Jollivet took in a boarder who resembled a composite of Valentino and Colman, according to Jollivet. In anger, he threatened the boarder.

INQUIRIES ABOUT SOUTHLAND GAIN

More Than 10,000 Received Monthly by Chamber

Visitors from Far Countries Come to All-Year Club

More than 10,000 requests are now received monthly by the Chamber of Commerce for information concerning Southern California, according to A. G. Arnoll secretary and general manager, who points out the fact that interest from the country in Southern California is increasing considerably this year as a result of the Chamber's publicity campaign.

The present rate of requests coming in for information more than 10,000 will have been reached by the end of the year. These are classified as follows: General requests for all kinds of information, which number 60,000 annually; requests for information from trade and Los Angeles, numbering 50,000; requests for specific data on industrial possibilities of Los Angeles, and for specific information on agricultural possibilities of Los Angeles county, 4000.

More than 1,000,000 pieces of mail are being sent annually by the chamber, not only to those asking information but to many who have requested information in person, as well as to select lists of people in all parts of the world.

Many stamps were used last year by the chamber in answering inquiries to reach 12.4 miles of envelopes around the new Chamber of Commerce Building, if placed side by side. If placed in books the stamps used by the chamber would carpet six bunkers one foot in area. A total of 60,000 1-cent stamps and 1,000 2-cent stamps were used in one year.

FRIENDS GREET STAR UPON ARRIVAL HOME

Pola Negri

POLA NEGRI WELCOMED AT STATION

Will Return to New York to Begin Work Upon New Picture; Scoffs at Plot

Pola Negri arrived home from a European trip of several weeks' duration yesterday with conflicting emotions. The dramatic star literally gurgled with delight as she stepped from the Golden State Limited of the Southern Pacific to greet a host of friends who awaited her. A few moments later she was expressing the deepest sorrow for the plight of Justine Valse, motion-picture actress who has given police the partial details of an asserted blackmail plot designed with Miss Negri as the proposed victim.

"If such a plot was formulated, no attempts have yet been made to embroil me," she declared.

"I knew nothing of it until I read the papers at Yuma," she said. "I read some headlines first and I was amazed. Then, when I read The Times, I decided the girl must be in some mental disorder.

"I shall have to see her or arrange to find out about her and the story she has told. I feel so very sorry for her."

Miss Valse is admittedly in a state of mental disorder, being a patient at the psycopathic ward of the General Hospital to give her an opportunity to regain her mental poise. In this she is rapidly succeeding, according to Attorney S. S. Hahn, who represents her.

Miss Negri, smiling, admitted there is some disadvantage in returning to the United States as an American citizen. It was due to this and her unfamiliarity with immigration laws as applied to Americans that resulted in the detention of her trunks and jewels at New York harbor, she explained on her arrival.

"That will all be straightened out, however," she said.

Miss Negri will remain in Los Angeles for two weeks, she said, and then will return to New York to make her next picture under the Lasky banner, the story for which has not yet been accepted. Immediately upon completion of the film, she will return again to her home in Beverly Hills. She still has a two-year contract with Lasky to fulfill, having signed it just before she left on her European trip.

QUARTERLY TAX PAYMENTS HIGH

Total Drop Only 16 Per Cent in Face of Rate Cut

Receipts at Local Collector's Office $14,417,387

Exceeds Combined Income of Twelve Western States

Income tax collections in the Southern California Internal Revenue District for the first quarter of 1925 were $14,417,387.03, compared with $16,756,961.44 for the corresponding period of 1924, a decrease of only 16 per cent in the face of the fact that the tax rate was reduced one-half on personal income and a further reduction of one quarter allowed on earned income.

EXCEEDS TWELVE STATES

Figures on collections for the first quarter of 1925 which were released yesterday by Collector Rex B. Goodcell under special permission of Commissioner of Internal Revenue David H. Blair, show that the income tax receipts of the Los Angeles district, which is composed of the ten southern counties, were $1,000,000 in excess of the combined income tax receipts of the entire twelve Western States of Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah, North Dakota, Nebraska, South Dakota and Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands thrown in.

The ten Southern California counties produced $3,000,000 more in income taxes than the first New York district; $4,000,000 more than the fourteenth New York district; three and a half times more than the twenty-first New York district, and nearly twice as much as the twenty-eighth New York district.

The Southern California collections were $3,000,000 in excess of those of the entire States of Indiana and Florida combined and $2,000,000 more than those of the State of Missouri.

BUSINESS BAROMETER

"The remarkable showing made by the Southern California district, facing as it did a loss of approximately 62 1-2 per cent in revenue on personal income taxes, is convincing evidence of the stability of business conditions," said Collector Goodcell. "These taxes were paid on income earned in 1924. My records show that 45,000 more persons paid their income taxes in full during the first quarter of 1925 than during the similar period of 1924. This indicates not only an increased production of income in 1924, but that in 1925, when the tax was due, taxpayers had ample funds on hand to pay it in full and were not compelled to take advantage of the quarterly payment plan."

ANGELENOS CELEBRATE MOTHER DAY

Custom More Generally Observed in City Than in Former Years

Mothers' Day, yesterday, was more generally observed in Los Angeles than ever before since the establishment of the custom.

Florists reported that last year's business was about doubled. The most common Mothers' Day custom is for sons and daughters to send their mothers flowers and to wear a flower in their coat lapel in memory of an absent or deceased mother. The modern florists' facilities for "sending flowers by telegraph" were employed by many whose mothers live in distant parts.

The candy dealers also reported a bigger Mothers' Day business than ever before, both in local sales and out-of-town orders. This business has continued for a week because of the orders for mailing candy to distant parts.

Likewise the telegraph companies had a record "file" of messages to mothers. The Western Union this year had special Mothers' Day greeting forms, similar to the Christmas and New Year's telegraph blanks. The Los Angeles business is larger than in most cities because of the number of elderly people here whose sons remain in the East and the many young men and women who have come west while their parents remain behind

CITY BEAUTIFUL FORECAST

Planners Back from Tour With Lesson Learned by Study of Flaws in Other Civic Centers

"If Los Angeles carries out her present plans for civic improvement, including the development of parks, boulevards and a great civic center, she will rank among the most beautiful cities in America," declared Sumner P. Hunt, president of the City Planning Commission, in a statement made yesterday. Mr. Hunt has just returned from an extensive tour of the principal cities of the country, made to study the latest developments in city planning, in hospital construction, and to attend the national convention of the American Institute of Architects as delegate from the Southern California chapter.

Accompanying Mr. Hunt on the tour were Edwin Bergstrom, president of the Allied Architects' Association, of which Mr. Hunt is also a director; Myron Hunt, Supervisor J. H. Bean and Dr. N. N. Wood, superintendent of the County Hospital. The Allied Architects' Association is now preparing plans for a $5,000,000 addition to the local hospital.

Considerable study was given by members of the party to the civic improvement plans of the various cities, nearly thirty in number, visited by the party, Mr. Hunt said. "One of the most striking situations we found in Cleveland," said Mr. Hunt, "where a large area was set aside many years ago for a civic center. They have built

RICHMOND PLANS NEW AIR FIELD

Letter Felicitates Local Chamber on Initiating Plane Mail Service

That interest in the commercial air service between Los Angeles and San Francisco is growing is indicated by a letter received this week by Dr. Ford A. Carpenter, manager of the aeronautical and meteorological department of the Chamber of Commerce, from Guy W. Wolf, secretary-manager of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, which stated that that city is making an effort to establish a commercial air field.

Congratulating the Los Angeles chamber on its enterprise in initiating the movement for commercial air field service between Los Angeles and the bay district, Secretary Wolf went on to state that a seventy-five-acre landing field which government experts pronounced to be one of the best on the Coast, will be available for such a service.

Secretary Wolf pointed out that it is far superior to Varney Field at San Mateo or any other field in the bay district. Its drainage, accessibility to highways and railroads, as well as the centers of population in the bay district, are pointed out by the Richmond secretary in his letter to Dr. Carpenter.

Ground Broken for Children's Home, Sawtelle

Peggy Hamilton and a group of children from the motion-picture studios aided yesterday in ground breaking at 2766 One Hundred and Third street, Sawtelle, for what is to become the Veterans' Children's Lodge, a home for youngsters whose fathers are in the Sawtelle Soldiers' Home. It is to be built on a site adjacent to the Veterans' Memorial Club and will accommodate twenty children.

Among the speakers were Dr. Decker of the Chamber of Commerce; David O'Leary of Pasadena; Mrs. Henry T. Wright, Harold Ferguson of Hollywood Post, American Legion, and Col. James Mattison of the Soldiers' Home.

A collection was taken for the benefit of the building fund and about $300 was contributed.

FILM NOTABLES AT WEDDING

Dancing Lessons Lead to Romance Culminating in Marriage of Mary's Cousin to New Yorker

Pickfair, the Beverly Hills home of Doug and Mary entertained yesterday afternoon in celebration of the marriage of Miss Verna Watson, Mary's cousin from her native city of Toronto, to Selmar Chalif of New York. The ceremony, which was attended by many prominent filmdom luminaries, was performed by Rev. Neal Dodd, the "movie parson" of the Little Church Around the Corner in Hollywood.

Mary Pickford in a powder blue organdy dress trimmed in peach acted as maid of honor, while Douglas Fairbanks officiated as best man. The bride, who was attended by her mother, Mrs. Arthur Watson, wore a simple white silk tulle dress over silver cloth. Mary Pickford's 8-year-old niece, bearing her own name, acted as flower girl.

The bride, who recently won a gold medal for dancing in New York, met her husband more than four years ago while taking ballet dancing at the academy managed by the bridegroom's father. Courtship came to a climax several days ago when Miss Watson arrived here for a short visit and in response to several telegrams dispatched a message of capitulation.

The bride, who is an attractive blond, gave her age on the marriage license as 20 and the bridegroom as 21. This is the first marriage performed in the Pickford-Fairbanks home since the marriage of Jack Pickford and Marilyn Miller more than three years ago. And Mary was maid of honor at that wedding while Rev. Mr. Dodd performed the ceremony.

During the ceremony two airplanes circled over the house and dropped lightly weighed white and red carnations on the roof.

Among the guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pickford, who, it was learned, will leave this week for New York en route for a short vacation in Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Forrest, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chaplin, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fairbanks, Raoul Walsh, R. W. McFarland, Mr. and Mrs. Al Parker, Benny Ziedman, Kenneth Davenport, George Fawcett, Charles Rosher, Mr. and Mrs. Finley Benson and Mrs. Elizabeth Ryder.

ECCENTRIC DEFENDS FILMS

John Armstrong Chaloner Says He Has Never Seen An Unclean Picture in His Life

Jazz music and modern moving pictures were defended staunchly yesterday by John Armstrong Chaloner, eccentric Virginia millionaire author, poet and philanthropist, who is here for a few days at the Ambassador. Chaloner is father of a movement to keep the boys and girls on the farms by bringing recreation in the form of moving pictures and dances to the rural communities.

Laughing at the critics of this "jazz age," Mr. Chaloner said:

"I am thoroughly in favor of jazz music. It is the only real humorous element music has been able to acquire. There is a lot of humor, you know, in the blasts from the saxophone.

"Through jazz America has won the field of humorous music, which the Germans held falsely for so long."

"Jazz," he continued, "is just in keeping with the times. Business and everything nowadays is run at top speed, and jazz is just one outlet for the energetic young people of today."

A grim believer in the future of the moving pictures, the eccentric Virginian said:

"I hear a lot of hue and cry today about unclean films. I have never seen an unclean moving picture, and I have been following them for years. Every picture has a strong moral, and I have never seen one in which vice goes unpunished and virtue is not rewarded.

In explaining his plan to have weekly community moving-picture shows and dances in remote rural public schools the poet said:

"The country boys and girls are bored to death in the winter, and it is to get away from this that so many of them desert the farms for the city. My plan gives them the bright lights of the city films and dances—without leaving the farm.

"Up to date the only community gathering in the remote rural sections has been a funeral."

Mr. Chaloner, who claims to be a "near-son" of California as his maternal grandfather came to San Francisco in 1850, by way of the Isthmus, recently gave $5000 to Nevada for relieving the monotony on the farm. Through his efforts and gift a pageant will be staged in Nevada, the 23rd inst., celebrating the opening of Arrowhead Trail from the Arizona line to Las Vegas and the discovery of the Pueblo Grande Nevada, the lost city near St. Thomas.

A band of Zuni Indians, direct descendants of inhabitants of the Lost City, is being brought from New Mexico to help reconstruct parts of the old village and to act in the pageant. Life in this section of the country from early days before the conquest of the Spaniards up to the present time will be enacted.

Mr. Chaloner is in the city arranging for moving pictures of the historical pageant.

FINAL RHODE ISLAND MEET

GOVERNOR HINTS GAS TAX FLAWS

Finds Southland Solid in Opposition

Will Hold State-Wide Quiz on Measure

Executive Returns North After Visit Here

Opposition to the Breed bill proposing an increased tax of 2 to 3 cents per gallon, generally prevalent throughout Southern California, and a question as to whether or not the bill is legally constructed to permit the gubernatorial signature that would make it a law, has made a strong impression upon Gov. Richardson. In a statement issued from his local office before he departed for Sacramento last night, the Governor made note of strong opposition to the bill which he has found here and declared that he will sound out the sentiment of other portions of the State before passing on the measure.

The Governor spent three days here discussing with various persons whether he should sign or veto various bills passed by the recent Legislature and awaiting action before the 30th inst.

"Principal interest centered in the gasoline tax," the Governor's statement said, "and almost without exception all who called to discuss it opposed the increased tax.

"Among those who voiced opposition was a delegation of labor men headed by E. E. Lampton, secretary-treasurer of Los Angeles County District Council of Carpenters, who assured the Governor that laboring men of Southern California of all trades are opposed to any higher gasoline taxes. They said that a large number of laboring men, particularly carpenters and metal tradesmen, own and use automobiles to go to and from work and to transport their tools and that an increase in gasoline tax would virtually mean a reduction of wages.

"Other protestants included representatives of merchants and business men who argued that automobiles owned and used by them in business are operated almost exclusively on city streets and not on State highways, for the building and upkeep of which the increased tax is intended."

While here, the Governor said, he "spent considerable time with judges, attorneys and others regarding a bill to establish municipal courts in Los Angeles and Long Beach." Other bills which he enumerated as among those discussed with persons here are the bill to place a 2-cent tax on oleomargarine, bill relating to municipal hospitals (Whittier,) bill relating to incorporation of the California bar (self-governing bar bill,) amendment to motor vehicle act, bill relating to opening and widening streets and various appropriation bills affecting Southern California.

NATIVE SONS CHOSEN FOR GATE CITY MEET

The Native Sons of the Golden West are conducting their convention at San Bernardino beginning today. They will be in session until the 15th inst. The Vaquero Parlor, No. 262, will be represented by Sidney W. Neighbors, past president; Edwin E. Ayers, president; George F. Ryan, secretary; Gus Alvarez, treasurer; Charles R. Lewis, president of the All City Employees' Association, and J. E. Dorsey. They will leave this city Wednesday morning, which is the day of the gathering. The Vaquero Parlor is the "baby" parlor of California, but has on its membership roll some of the best-known Native Sons in the State. It is now carrying on a vigorous drive for new members.

ABYSSINIAN PRINCE TO SPEAK AT 'Y' TONIGHT

"From Jungles to Christ," is the theme of an address to be given in the lobby of the Central "Y," 715 South Hope street, tonight at 7:30. The speaker, Prince J. E. Blayechettai, F.R.S., of the royal house of Abyssinia, preacher, linguist, statesman, and now a Methodist missionary, was educated in England and has received the degrees of M.A. and D.D. The Prince, at the risk of death at the hands of the heathen priests of his country, has been instrumental in leading to Christianity more than 10,000 of his countrymen. The public is invited.

Stories of Music

FOR MUSIC MEMORY CONTEST of the LOS ANGELES PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The Los Angeles Elementary Schools are preparing a remarkable music memory contest conducted by the Department of Music, under Kathryn E. Stone, supervisor, to take place the 19th and 20th inst., at Manual Arts High School. Through the courtesy of the Fitzgerald Music Company, KHJ radio station of The Times, will broadcast each afternoon from 3 to 3:30, seven selections included in the contest with a story in connection with them. These stories will be reproduced on this page of The Times daily, except Sunday, until the 20th inst., inclusive, to order that the 35,000 school children who tune in KHJ may have a complete record of the contest.

The first selection on Saturday afternoon was the Andante from the Fifth Symphony by Beethoven. Beethoven wrote nine symphonies which are epics of life written in musical terms. Owing to his great love of nature, his strong faith in God, despite the affliction of total deafness, and his unswerving devotion to an ideal, the name of Beethoven ranks with Shakespeare in literature and Michael Angelo in sculpture. The slow movements from all of his symphonies breathe of a quiet serenity of spirit and peace which "passeth all understanding."

The second number was "The Volga Boat Song." This is a perfect example of pure folk song. Down the icy waters of the Volga River creeps a great barge. It is towed by a long line of Russian peasants in shaggy sheepskin coats. The ropes burn beneath their hands and the burden is heavy as they struggle along the towpath. But they do not mind, for they sing a song as they work, a song of their beautiful and mysterious "Mother Volga" whom they love so.

The third number was the Nocturne from the Mendelssohn "Midsummer Night's Dream" music. Mendelssohn wrote this music when he was a very young man, and his happy joyous nature so untouched by any sorrow comprehended quickly the exquisite fantasy of Shakespeare's story of Titania, Queen of the Fairies; the little imp, Puck, and the clown, Bottom. The nocturne is surely a picture of the little Fairy Queen curled up asleep in a yellow buttercup while the wind rocked her to and fro.

The other numbers for the afternoon were "La Paloma," "Funiculi Funiculi," a Spanish and Italian folk song, and "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," a lovely old English air with words by Ben Johnson, an eighteenth century poet.

The Lancer

by Harry Carr

WRITING for a living is no pudding.

Edna Ferber told the reporters recently how she wrote "So Big," which won the Pulitzer prize this year for the best novel written in America.

She says that she sits down at her typewriter every morning at 9 and sticks there until 4—whether she feels like it or not.

She compels herself to write at least 1000 words during that time. This, she continues every day including Sundays. She says that she began "So Big" in January and finished it in June. The publishers wanted her to call it "Salina" and she had to threaten to withdraw it altogether before she could keep the name "So Big," which made the fortune of the book.

SELLING BRAINS

Channing Pollock, the dramatist who wrote "The Fool," "The Sign on the Door" and other well-known plays, said that success in authoring is due to good salesmanship rather than good writing.

"I have sold every word I have written," he said. "And to persons who know the output this must be some testimonial to my persistence and powers of persuasion."

HOW TERRIBLE!

Irvin S. Cobb said it is fortunate that authors are not born; that they have to make themselves.

"Imagine the blow to a mother," he said, "to discover that she had just given birth to an author."

He made this further surprising statement: "Every piece of literature is a combination of fragments the author has read somewhere."

THE GRILL

Harold McGrath said the way to train for authorship is to "broil a little while on the grill of newspaper work."

DISCOVERING AMERICA

Here's another note of bitter irony:

New York, having imported the Russian Ballet, the Moscow Art Theater, Balieff, Max Reinhardt, the drama of Central Europe, not to mention a herd of Czecho-Slovak authors, Austrian authors, Hungarian authors, French dancers, German singers, . . . has finally made a new discovery; it has discovered America. The negro singers—Paul Robeson and Lawrence Brown—are the present sensation of New York.

TOO MUCH IMMIGRANT

The last time I was in New York I met a member of one of the old New York families who was moving out.

"I am going to leave the old home and move to America," he said. "I don't care where as long as it is American."

He said that New York had become so foreign in population and spirit and in thought that it sickened his soul.

I wonder what he will think—wherever he is living now—to read that the old Vincent Astor home has been sold to a Polish immigrant—who started as a house painter and now flings millions about.

FRONT-PAGE BRYAN

You will have to hand it to William Jennings Bryan. After all these years of defeat and humiliation he is still on the front pages of the newspapers.

There is no doubt about it; no other celebrity has ever held fame so long.

The puzzling part of it is this: Bryan is an extremely commonplace old man; he was an extremely commonplace young man.

Years ago when he was running for President the last time, I was assigned by this paper to stick around his home in Lincoln. Of all public men I had met, he seemed the least impressive. He seemed wary, suspicious. I remember that he always anxiously pumped us reporters to find out what his neighbors were saying about him.

FLORISTS ARE KHJ PATRONS

Howard & Smith Sponsor Mother's Day Program

Mystery Violinist's Identity to be Told Wednesday

BY CLAIRE MELLONINO

Nature has no more beautiful medium of expression than her flowers. Man reaches the heights of expression through music. Consequently when nature's favorite children are made the subject of man's musical creations the result usually quickens one's pulse.

Last night Radioland was given this thrill through the generosity of Howard & Smith, one of our city's oldest florists. Those who glory in the progress of Los Angeles will be interested to know that Howard & Smith have contributed substantially not only to industrial growth, but to the reputation Southern California enjoys as a spot of beauty. In national and international competition, this company's roses have obtained first awards in many instances and annually millions of their roses are sent East. They are pioneers in the work of plant propagation which has transformed the Southland from a barrent desert into an earthly paradise.

With their characteristic sense of proportions they selected Mother's Day as a most opportune and appropriate occasion upon which to broadcast a flower program, believing that flowers and music constituted the most fitting vehicle for the observance of this day. The floral festival arranged by their representative, J. Howard Johnson, comprised the Biltmore Hotel Concert Orchestra, Frances Gabrille, operatic soprano; Ralph Reilly, lyric tenor, and Catheline Jackson, harp.

CONCERT ORCHESTRA

The Biltmore Hotel Concert Orchestra, under the able direction of Edward Fitzpatrick, violinist, gave with their customary style and appeal a program consisting of "Dance of the Flowers," by Delibes; "Whispering Flowers," by Von Bloek; "My Wild Irish Rose," by Olcott, and "Among the Poppies," from the pen of Mr. Angelotti, who presides at the organ in this organization. Edward Fitzpatrick, Joseph Heindl, and Israel Biendelsohn, leader and members, respectively of the orchestra, also contributed one solo each.

Frances Gabrille and her gorgeous soprano voice glided through a group of works evolved around flowers with the added feature of harp accompaniment for each number.

NEW SOLOIST

Ralph Reilly, who had been heard on several occasions as a member of a male quartet, embraced the opportunity given last night to blossom forth as soloist. The pleasure which he undoubtedly derived from his initial radio appearance was fully shared by his auditors.

While your eager curiosity will probably prevent you from overlooking the program to be presented Wednesday night by the Broadway Department Store, we wish to remind you that the identity of the mysterious violinist will be revealed during the evening. This artist has been proclaimed one of the world's leading ten violinists and we would suggest that you get better acquainted with this musician.

Aged Watchman at Elks' Building Injured in Fall

Joe Gore, 60 years of age, of 2055 East Seventh street, nightwatchman employed at the Elks' new building, under construction at Sixth and Park View streets, was reported in a critical condition yesterday as the result of injuries received when he fell thirty feet into the basement of the building.

The aged watchman was discovered early yesterday morning by Andy Anderson, another watchman on the premises, who was attracted to the basement by Gore's groans. He had dropped through a scaffolding above the ground floor when he missed his footing.

Gore was taken to the Receiving Hospital where it was learned he had both knees broken in the fall in addition to severe cuts about the face and forehead and probable internal injuries. He later was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital where it was said the patient's condition was critical because of his advanced age.

VETERANS TO DISCUSS CONDITIONS

Efforts of Government to Better Lot of Disabled Men to be Told

The fifth annual convention of the State Department of the Disabled Veterans of the World War opens tomorrow at the headquarters of Post 1, 246 South Hill street, and closes Friday. Matters pertaining to the betterment of conditions for war-scarred veterans will be acted on by the visiting delegates. Efforts to enact certain legislation to aid the disabled carry on their battle in life will be stressed, according to plans.

Men prominent in government agencies and acquainted with the trials of the disabled have been obtained to address the delegates. K. J. Scudder, manager of the regional office of the United States Veterans' Bureau, will speak on the desires of the government to assist the disabled at the opening session.

The need of better conditions in government institutions now housing disabled ex-service men will be told by State Commander Jesse Widman. Holding reports of numerous committees on investigation from different sections of the State, Commander Widman is expected to report conditions that hitherto have never been revealed.

Among the interesting reports anticipated at the convention is the marked progress made during the past year under the guidance of the efficient incumbent officers. Co-operation of officers of Post 1 and the State officials has resulted in rare accomplishments for disabled men throughout the State, it is reported.

The present State officers are: Jesse Widman, president; A. Stanton Butterworth, first vice-president; Andrew M. Lakey, second vice-president; Bayard Brooks, third vice-president; Buron Fitts, fourth vice-president; James A. Knox, fifth vice-president; Paul Kounovsky, treasurer; N. I. Colman, acting secretary; Irvine C. Enger, Louis Bueter and Fred A. Trombly, past presidents.

PLANNERS SEE CITY BEAUTIFUL

among other buildings, a large auditorium, which attracts thousands of people to the civic center. They now find it imperative, however, to make provision for the great number of automobiles which seek parking space in the civic center every day, and they propose to provide this space through exactly the same means which we employed in preparing plans for our Los Angeles Administration Center. Cleveland city officials are about to put before the people a bond issue to provide funds for creating a great sublevel parking space under their main civic center plaza—one of the most important features of our Administration Center plan. In Cleveland, however, they will have to take up their plaza, build the sublevel garage, and then replace the trees and planting.

ALL FALL SHORT

"In Kansas City we found an interesting civic center development, but in planning their civic center sufficient ground was not acquired, and the people are faced with the problem of buying additional ground, now highly improved, at a high figure. Philadelphia, which undertook to cut a great mall, varying in width from 200 to 600 feet, right through the heart of the city's business district, has practically completed its great project, and I regard it as one of the outstanding achievements in city planning in this country.

"Baltimore, in the development of its civic center, had a problem very similar to ours, and the manner in which they solved their problem through a system of high-level and low-level streets, connected by ramps, convinced us that our plan was not only practicable, but will also prove to be artistic and beautiful in execution."

The lesson which the committee learned, according to Mr. Hunt, was that nearly every city visited had fallen short in one of two respects; either in not planning a large enough civic center to begin with, or in failing to get control of the property to be used for development, with the result that in a number of instances the civic centers are surrounded with improvements of a poor type.

Among the cities visited by the committee were St. Louis, Cincinnati, Boston, New York, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo and Denver, as well as many of the smaller cities of the East and Middle West.

AGENT TELLS BANK 'SALE' TO FORD IN MERGER QUIZ

Bunko Men Claimed Auto Maker's Millions Behind Syndicate for Rail Consolidation

The assertion that absolute control of the Bank of Italy had been obtained, with $100,000,000 of Henry Ford's money behind the deal, was one of the remarkable "come-on" arguments used by H. D. Hibbs to obtain money from Los Angeles citizens, according to statements made last night by Lawrence B. McCord, special agent of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

McCord made a sweeping investigation last December into the activities of Hibbs and his partner, T. D. Hennessy, in the gigantic rail merger scheme that landed the two "brokers de luxe" in the County Jail, and it was on evidence uncovered by McCord, working on direct orders from Washington, that Dist.-Atty. Keyes caused the arrests of Hibbs and Hennessy and revealed losses of more than $500,000 by Southern California "investors."

McCord, posing as an eastern capitalist, arranged to invest $25,000 with Hibbs and Hennessy; and Hibbs, McCord stated, even promised to "pay off" the disguised Federal sleuth with Bank of Italy stock.

"He assured me very readily that he could easily obtain the stock, in which I pretended to be interested, although it was not publicly for sale," McCord added.

CLAIMED SECOND BANK

Not only did Hibbs declare positively that his syndicate had obtained control of the Bank of Italy, according to McCord, but Hibbs and Hennessy were quietly promoting a plan, the Federal agent stated, whereby they hoped to make profitable use of the influence of another local bank. At the time of the arrests, officials of this bank were investigating this particular phase of the activities of the two men, McCord declared. Private investigations also were being conducted by D. C. Moore, president of Investment Auditors of California and by H. L. Bentley, the stock and bond brokerage house bearing his name.

On top of these revelations came also a detailed statement from C. J. Judd, complaining witness in the case, and from John Brokaw, who lost and regained $30,000, in which they asserted Hibbs and Hennessy are only two of five men back of the rail merger deal. Two of the three others, they declared, are Los Angeles men and well known.

USED RAIL COMMISSION

"Hibbs and Hennessy have been pulling this scheme for at least four years, I gathered," McCord, who lives in the Blackstone Apartments, began his story. "It might have worked indefinitely, if they hadn't used the name of the Interstate Commerce Commission, saying that the commission had that $6,000,000,000 in escrow and even telling some people I understand, that money had been used to 'reach' members of the commission.

"The commission wired me from Washington to investigate and report. I began on the case last December, and at that time I located only two people who had put money into the deal. One was Earl C. Anthony, who said he had only invested $1000. But H. L. Bentley also had reported the matter to the commission in the interests of a client of his, while D. C. Moore likewise was investigating for John G. Wray, the motion-picture director. I had to go East, and urged Bentley and Moore to keep on the case. Later they gave me a lot of valuable information.

"Hibbs and Hennessy were under investigation by a local bank also. They had large deposits there, and there was evidence they were planning to make use of the bank in a financial way. This tip-off got me acquainted with William D. Klausman, manager of the Ambassador branch of E. F. Hutton & Co., and still more information was forthcoming. Through Klausman I finally met a man named Davis who worked for Hibbs and Hennessy.

GOT FULL STORY

"Davis gave me the full rail merger story, believing I was an easterner looking for a chance to invest. I fell into the trap, and asked to meet Hibbs. Next day by appointment I went to the rail merger office and there met Hibbs, Norton and Davis. Hibbs repeated the story told me by Davis, and also mentioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to me. I offered to invest $50,000, but they were pretty shrewd, and advised me that $25,000 would be 'about right.'

"I wanted to talk to Hennessy. I wanted to get him to say in the presence of witnesses what Hibbs had said about him—that he was representing the Interstate Commerce Commission in this deal. You understand, of course, that such an admission would render him liable for impersonating a Federal officer.

"So an appointment was made for the next afternoon at 2 o'clock. This was after the matter had been turned over to Dist.-Atty. Keyes. That afternoon, with the warrants already issued, I kept the appointment at Hibbs's office, but Hennessy failed to appear. Hibbs was arrested that afternoon. Hennessy's arrest followed that evening, but not until I had talked to him. He wouldn't come out flat-footedly and say he represented the commission, merely hedged on that point and implied it was the truth."

Judd, who swore to the complaint against the two "brokers," also backed up McCord's Bank of Italy story, declaring that Hibbs made the same representations to him. Judd and Brokaw are close friends, although Judd was responsible for Brokaw's investment of $30,000 and was to receive a commission on that particular transaction. They were seen together at Judd's home at 1772 Tamarind Drive yesterday.

THOUGHT IT WAS GOOD

R. R. Bray, a broker in the Commercial Exchange Building, first told me about Hibbs and Hennessy," Judd said. "He was planning to put some money into the scheme himself. It looked good to me, but I didn't have the money. I told Brokaw about it, and he and I, with his attorney, Ernest B. Coyle, went over the plan with Hibbs, J. E. (Dick) Pettibone, C. R. Norton and H. M. Reed. Mr. Coyle advised against it. Then Pettibone came back at me later, said there was a commission of $30,000 in it for him and offered me one-third of the commission. We talked it over repeatedly, and finally on November 28, Mr. Brokaw invested $10,000, and on two subsequent dates similar amounts. He made Hibbs give him notes for the first $20,000.

"Klausman, branch manager for E. F. Hutton, first tipped us off that everything might not be as rosy as we figured. He arranged for us to meet McCord, a Federal agent representing the Interstate Commerce Commission. McCord showed us a letter from the commission proving to us the whole scheme was off-color.

"On Coyle's advice Mr. Brokaw went to Hibbs's office. Norton was there also. Brokaw demanded his money back, and Hibbs tried to give him an order on Hennessy for it. Brokaw — well, you tell it, Brokaw."

Brokaw, picking up the tale, declared Hibbs at first said he had no money, and later refused to repay the $30,000.

GETS CERTIFIED CHECK

"But that night Hennessy called me on the telephone and said he would pay back my money if I'd meet him at the Ambassador the next morning. I went there and found Hibbs, Hennessy and Norton. I surrendered my notes and received a certified check for $30,000. On the night of the 6th inst., Judd and I met McCord at Dist.-Atty. Keyes's office and Judd swore to the complaints against Hibbs and Hennessy."

Evidence that the "rail merger" activities of Hibbs and Hennessy extended to California cities other than Los Angeles; that they reached as far east as Cleveland O., and that the two promoters have garnered $300,000,000 in the last thirteen years also was obtained yesterday. Santa Barbara citizens contributed $200,000 to the scheme, according to an operative of the Burns International Detective Agency. Burns was retained by Santa Barbara investors to investigate the scheme, and later reported "it was a pure bunco game," the operative declared yesterday.

H. M. Reed, mentioned by Judd and Brokaw as working for Hibbs and who is said also to have lost heavily in the merger plan, is reported to be authority for the statement that Hibbs and Hennessy cleaned up $300,000,000 since 1912. More than $1,000,000, it is understood came from Cleveland men and women.

KEYES GOES NORTH

Dist.-Atty. Keyes left Los Angeles last night for San Francisco to continue investigations into the rail merger there. While in San Francisco he intends to interview officials of the Western Pacific Railroad, one of the roads Hibbs and Hennessy claim to have merged with others.

"Of course, we know they didn't," the District Attorney said, "but we have got to prove it."

He added that he expects to subpoena several Western Pacific officials for the hearing here. Before leaving Mr. Keyes issued instructions to Special Investigator Bert Ramsey and Charles Reimer to start a general clean-up of "all ten-for-one brokers" and others handling similar schemes.

Postoffice authorities yesterday refused to affirm or deny rumors that they also launched an investigation of the activities of Hibbs and Hennessy. McCord stated, however, that his investigations had uncovered practically no evidence on which charges of using the mails to defraud might be based. The entire scheme was worked largely through personal solicitation.

"The finding of one letter, however, only one, will be sufficient to constitute a case for the government," McCord added.

Both Hibbs and Hennessy remained in the County Jail yesterday. Paul Schenk, their attorney, stated he expects to have their bail ready at 10 o'clock this morning.

ENGINEER MAPS HIGHWAY WORK

Southland Improvements to Cost $1,700,000

Apportionment of Gas Tax to Supply Funds

Entire Program to be Under Way Immediately

Fifteen major reconstruction improvements on Southern California highways have been mapped out by Division Engineer S. V. Corbaley of the State Highway Commission for immediate work in Los Angeles, Orange, San Diego and Ventura counties. The work, which will approximate $1,700,000, will be met by Southern California's share of gasoline-tax returns under which the thirteen southern counties will receive $2,500,000 during the year and Northern California approximately $2,250,000.

Some of the work already is under way, the engineer said, and bids have been advertised for in several other instances. The fifteen major improvements as outlined by Division Engineer Corbaley are as follows:

LIST OF IMPROVEMENTS

Paving Whittier Boulevard between Montebello and Whittier to a width of fifty-six feet with seven-inch Class A concrete construction. Bids to be received June 1.

Construction of bridge over San Gabriel River, to be made of eight sixty-four-foot reinforced concrete spans with a forty-foot roadway. Contract was awarded Charles and W. Steffgen on April 13, on their estimate of $92,575.20.

In co-operation with the county and Union Pacific, the grade crossing of Whittier Boulevard between Montebello and the Union Pacific will be eliminated by construction of a subway. The cost is set at $160,000, half of which will be paid by the railroads and the other half by the county and commission.

Ventura Boulevard from Universal City west six miles will be widened to seventy feet, the excess to be divided by the commission and the city.

RIDGE ROUTE

An allocation of $70,000 has been set aside to complete the daylighting" on the Ridge Route, removing blind curves, widening narrow embankments and improving points of hazard.

Construction of an overhead bridge across the Santa Fe near Fullerton as part of the relocation of State highway to San Diego to eliminate grade crossings. A reinforced concrete viaduct 1,000 feet long will be built. The county's share is set at $35,000.

Highway relocation across San Juan and San Onofre creeks on the Coast Route to San Diego and construction of two new bridges to eliminate the most dangerous curves on highway. Sixteen curves will be done away with. Bids on grading work were opened on the 13th inst., and R. A. Watson, of Los Angeles was low bidder, with $19,057. The San Onofre Creek bridge contract was awarded to the Construction Company April 7 for $58,216.25. Bids on the San Mateo bridge will be opened the 20th inst.

Dry Enforcers Grab Eleven, Five Stills, in Raids

A roadside bottling works was among the captures of Chief Investigator George Contreras's anti-booze squad over the week-end. Other seizures included five stills, two automobiles and eleven prisoners.

Harry E. Brown of Walton Station was operating the bottling works, according to the officers. They declared they followed him to the place, and when the lights doused and found him busily engaged in filling bottles from a jug. His wife was also arrested. The other prisoners were seized in West Hollywood, where Sam Welsbart was booked for assorted transportation of a case of gin, loss of a Cadillac to the officers, and driving on the same kind of paper, losing a Buick.

Stills were obtained, the officers said, in the arrests of Bert Cornell and Mrs. J. D. Allen of Pete Gonsales at the home of Frank Tescione and C. Lopez of Jimtown. Other arrests at Long Beach were V. Brabo and Vincent Perez for asserted possession and sale of intoxicants.

TO ARMS

The trouble is that some nations think that they have to go to arms conference heavily armed.

THE RIFFIANS

The Spaniards are sure that the Riffians are ruffians. At least they are said to be of the Riff-raff. They have a few nasty fights left in them, at any rate.

WHAT PRICE FREEDOM?

The verdict of the masses is that an editor who pays for free verse must be crazy. There is at least ground for the suspicion.

HER AMBITIONS

OLD STUFF

Psychics are trying to prove progress in the photography of thought. They have been photographing thought in Hollywood for years and have not been overparticular about the thoughts, at that.

HOW THE EARTH WAS BORN

The latest theory is that a star accidently passed fairly close to the sun and, by means of gravitation, pulled away a part of its substance, which finally rounded itself into Mother Earth. In like manner, the theory holds, the moon was born. Some astronomers believe the withdrawal of the moon left the vast depression which is now the bed of the Pacific Ocean.

THERE'S WORK AHEAD

Further rumors of Cabinet changes are denied. Secretary Work is now declared to have no idea of resigning. Work will go on as usual. This will be characteristic of the Coolidge administration. Work is its middle name. It would seem impossible to even construct a Cabinet without Work. With good Work in the Department of the Interior the digestive operations of Uncle Sam are going finely.

THE PIONEERS

Uncle Joe Cannon met some old-timers at a luncheon the other day in honor of his 89th birthday. Likewise, Chauncey Depew enjoyed his 7000th banquet in connection with his 91st anniversary. These two pioneers were in at the dawning of the Republican party and have been as true as steel to the organization ever since. They will be remembered with delight by good fellows everywhere for all time.

THE SOAP HABIT

In a divorce case now pending the husband charges the wife with addiction to the terrible soap habit. It seems that she eats Castile soap. This is one way of yielding obeisance to the bar. Yet it would seem that the husband should feel himself lucky. A lady who absorbs a couple of bars of soap every day should be exceptionally sweet and clean. Unless the lady is forever blowing bubbles there is nothing to worry about.

TREASURE TROVE

Now they are going to dig for the treasure of Alexander the Great. In a day when his soldiers threatened mutiny he is supposed to have buried much of his booty in what is now the village of Andrievka, near the Caspian Sea. This is an oil section and while they are drilling for the loot of the Persian empire they may strike petroleum and do better yet. But there is quite a lure to Alexander's belongings. Maybe they can dig up the sword that severed the Gordian knot. That would be worth $3 in any museum.

SEIZED OPPORTUNITY

The Astor residence on Fifth avenue in New York, which has been one of the show places of Gotham for two generations, has been sold by Vincent Astor to a former sign painter, who worked his way over from Poland some twenty years ago and now wants the site for a $10,000,000 hotel. When he had work he saved money and when he had money he put it into city property. He is doing as the Astors have always done, but he happened to catch the tide at its flood. Now he is one of the big fellows in a big city.

A CHANCE FOR OUR POETS

California is full of poets, some of whom are a joy to the commonwealth, others merely a solace to themselves. Some believe this material age offers them a scanty field for gathering laurels and regard editors and publishers as a hard-boiled lot. All those who wish to put their merits to the test will be afforded an unusual chance to do so by the California's Diamond Jubilee Citizens' Committee. The committee offers a gold diamond-studded medal for the best poem to commemorate the romantic history, the lure and beauty of this State. Search the world over and no finer source of inspiration than this was ever presented to those who can clothe a noble theme in glowing imagery.

THE ORATORICAL CONTEST

Few gatherings in Washington this year will be possessed of greater potentialities for national good than that of last Friday evening, when one of the capital's greatest and most brilliant audiences heard a 15-year-old Alabama youngster win the national high school oratorical contest.

The President of the United States was among those who acclaimed the victory of young Robert Sessions in the finals of a contest in which 1,400,000 American boys and girls have competed. And it was the President who, in a formal and striking address, declared the contest to be one of the greatest of American institutions—not for the number of contestants, great as that is, but because of the central theme and basic purpose of the contest—the study of the Constitution of the United States. Now concluding its third successful year, the contest is regarded today as perhaps the most valuable single educational agency ever devised for the perpetuation of the principles of our government.

The general approval of the project is clearly indicated by its remarkable development. Launched at first as a purely local enterprise in Southern California in 1923, its success that year led to its being undertaken on a national scale in 1924. Support of the movement was instantaneous in every part of the country. Educators, statesmen, jurists and prominent citizens in every line of endeavor lauded the contest and lent their hearty co-operation. A million girls and boys wrote orations in more than 13,000 high schools.

Participants in the contest just closed numbered 1,400,000, an increase of 40 per cent over last year's participation. The number of schools enrolled was 16,216, or more than 3000 in excess of the number last year. The total of awards, including those at the national finals and at different elimination events plus the prizes offered locally by co-operating newspapers, patriotic organizations and others, aggregated $46,650. Publicity was given the contest by 1120 publications during the preliminaries, in addition to the accounts of the Washington finals carried by practically every newspaper in the United States.

An indication of the value of the constitutional contest idea is furnished by the fact that it has been taken up in Mexico. A contest following closely the lines of the American competition is now in progress in the secondary schools in that country. It is sponsored by the Mexican newspapers and has received the enthusiastic approval of the Mexican Department of Education, as well as high government officials and prominent citizens generally throughout that country.

The movement has also extended to the colleges and universities of America. Sponsored by the Better America Federation of California, an intercollegiate contest on the subject of the Constitution was opened this year shortly after that in the high schools. It has been carried on quietly but nearly every institution of college rank in the United States has taken part in this event, which will reach its climax in the national finals to take place at Philharmonic Auditorium in this city on June 5.

The local Japanese have followed an example set by the Italians and have organized a contest for students of their race modeled on the lines of the national one. All over the country citizenship movements of many kinds owe their origin to that contest.

And in at least two important respects the results of the contest just closed have been revealed in a manner far more striking than in 1924. First, the young orators have displayed a better understanding of the subject matter and a greater average oratorical ability. Second, abundant evidence has been forthcoming showing that the contest movement is highly effective in promoting a greater respect for the fundamental principles of American government and in counteracting the insidious influence of radical propaganda, not only among the contestants but in the public at large.

Last year's orations were to a considerable extent recitals of historical facts pertaining to the Constitution. This year the majority of the youthful orators devoted themselves to a study of the real significance of the Constitution.

The intrinsic value of this intensive study of the Constitution by millions of the rising generation of America was strikingly voiced by President Coolidge himself in his address. He declared that the problems which these young people are by this study fitting themselves to solve are the selfsame problems upon whose right solution depend the future well-being, aye the very existence of the United States. Not only has this contest imbued our youth with the fundamental principles of stable representative government, declared the President, but it has likewise turned the thoughts of millions of teachers, parents and mentors to a study of those prime essentials of Americanism, the spiritual and institutional foundations of this nation.

VERSATILITY COUNTS

An essential truth regarding the profession of the motion-picture player—that versatility counts more than anything—is brought forcibly to mind by the experience of George Billings, whose portrayal of Abraham Lincoln was regarded by competent critics as one of the most remarkable character impersonations ever screened. Billings had read, studied and lived Abraham Lincoln until some of his admirers said he was Abraham Lincoln—a hyperbolical statement, though natural enough when one considers his extraordinary physical resemblance to the martyred President.

Yet, despite Billings's great histrionic triumph in representing this famous character, he is now reported to be unable to find employment in his profession and is said to be destitute of means. As one writer said of his brief period of success, "That was his day of glory; and then the sun went down."

The films have furnished several examples of the Billings class, where actors have reached their apogee in one grand sweep and then vanished into outer space, but there have been no cases more pathetic than that of this Lincoln of the films. The trouble is that a screen actor who does something unique and inimitable often is unable to personate more than one character with any degree of success and, even if he were able to do so, the distinctive "hit" he has made in his one great role overshadows in the managerial and public mind anything he might do by way of the portrayal of other characters.

It is clear that to the film actor who would make a series of successes long enough to establish himself as a favorite and reap great material rewards a single success means little. He must be able to assume acceptably role after role, and to shine in each part he plays.

In this respect he is wholly different from actors of the speaking stage. Joseph Jefferson played "Rip Van Winkle" thousands of times over a period of many years and was liberally paid for his work. Had he assumed that single character in a film play, and none other, his day of glory would have been a brief one and his financial reward would have been comparatively small, even though his salary had been $10,000 a week. The same may be said of David Warfield in his unique character of "The Music Master."

In stage acting repetition makes reputation. The film player, on the other hand, has no opportunity to repeat. He must be versatile enough to follow up one successful role with another altogether different and to keep on doing so. Minnie Maddern Fiske has played "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," said to be her best role, night after night on many stages for years. Blanche Sweet of the films could play "Tess" but once and, had she confined herself to it, her name would now be forgotten. Jane Cowl appeared as Mary Turner in "Within the Law" in hundreds of performances and made fame and money out of this clever characterization. Norma Talmadge played the same role on the screen, but she could not have rested her fame and fortune upon it nor upon half a dozen other leading-lady parts in as many other plays.

Akin to this is the experience of people in other professions. No orator likes a reputation analogous to that of Single-Speech Hamilton. The one-time-and-out game doesn't pay, even if the performance is so phenomenal as to astound or enthrall everybody. The man of one great book or play or speech is like Sullivan's organist whose "lost chord," though once struck in all its thrilling grandeur and fullness, never could be struck again.

As for the film player, he must keep on striking great chords or, in baseball parlance, he will strike out and, so far as he is concerned, the game will be over.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR

A former picturesque character of every rural community or small town was the country doctor. He wore a Prince Albert coat, a high hat and a benevolent smile. He came as nearly to sleeping with his boots on as any hero of pioneer days. No fireman was ever more alert than he to grasp his medicine case and great coat.

The children all spoke to him on the street and he called them by name. He was not only the family physician, but also the friendly adviser of the whole countryside. He was saturated with drugs and wisdom. And often his wisdom was more effective than his medicine.

He bore the burdens and secrets of the whole neighborhood buttoned up inside of his great coat. He may not have been as scientific as the surgeons of today; but he could dispose of a recalcitrant appendix with a sweep or saw off a limb with a grin and success. He brought more babies into the world with less fuss and expense and fewer casualties than any other generation of doctors on earth.

But the country doctor is disappearing. So says Dr. William Allen Pusey of Chicago, president of the American Medical Association. In the passing of this old-fashioned institution there is a distinct loss to society. The ear and the eye and the teeth and the baby may each have its specialist today; but the home lacks the family physician. Where once we had the kindly eyes, the friendly hand, the tender voice we now have two big goggles, a rubber glove and white-robed specters circling about. You are not certain whether it is an operation or an initiation. The country doctor came in with good cheer, flung gloom out of the window and vanquished fear by his composure.

These may be better and more sanitary days; but we cannot help looking back wistfully at the once-familiar figure. We believe in the surgeon of today; but we loved the country doctor!

SCIENCE AND RELIGION

The residents of nine colleges and universities in California who were requested some time ago by the State Board of Education to examine, as a committee, the textbooks in science used in the public high schools and junior colleges of the State, with a view to discovering whether the subject of evolution was presented in such a way as to discredit the Bible and to develop in the minds of students an attitude of irreverence and atheism, have not only examined the textbooks, but have granted hearings to ministers of various denominations and have come to a unanimous decision. It is that no statements derogatory to religion have been found. In some few books evidence in support of the theory of evolution is presented, but in only a few instances is the possible bearing of evolution upon science discussed at all, and in those cases the writers have taken pains to assure their young readers that there is no conflict. Everyone with any pretense to an education, as these nine presidents say, must be informed as to scientific facts and generally accepted theories. The truth has nothing to fear except that it shall be hidden. Veritas nihil veretur nisi abscondi.—[New York Times.

Just About It

By James J. Montague

TO A MOCKER

I'm glad to greet you in the spring
When from the skies your way you wing,
And perch beside my door and sing.

Your cheery and exuberant lay,
While twilight melts from gold to gray.

I joy to watch you build your nest
With such a brave and eager zest—
That knows no weariness nor rest.

But when, amid "the white dawn clear,"
Beside my window you appear,
And chant your carol of good cheer—

I cannot say that I rejoice
To listen—though I have no choice—
To your somewhat tumultuous voice.

You went to bed, as birds all do,
At eight o'clock—I went at two,
A fact that should appeal to you.

If you these hours must allot
To song, pray seek some other spot—
I need the sleep—though you do not.

You should remember, little bird,
That hearts are far more deeply stirred
By songs that are most seldom heard.

And though you'll haply think me rough—
I'll say you overdo your stuff!

HOLLY IS GOING

Recently it was announced that the American chestnut had all but passed from the American forest and that a few years hence the last of those princely trees immortalized by Longfellow will have disappeared from the continent. Some malignant tree blight has attacked the chestnut and in spite of all the species is doomed to an early extinction.

Now it is the American holly that is in danger. This sylvan beauty, loved for its evergreen leaves and waxen berries, like the chestnut, will soon pass from the forest reaches unless a danger signal is seen and heeded. It is the ruthless hand of the forest despoiler that menaces the holly, the selfish hand of the hunter seeking a tree for Christmas. So widespread have been the ravages of these thoughtless gentry that the day of the holly can now be numbered with accuracy.

Why should this be done? Why should it be permitted? There are other trees that will answer the purpose admirably. Indeed, it were better to have done with Christmas trees altogether, as so many prairie regions have done, than to remove from the American forest its most impressive beauty. Some means of saving the holly from destruction should be found and carefully applied.—[Oklahoman.

Nearly 20,000,000 persons live in American villages and the surrounding 30,000,000 farming population largely depends upon them for business, educational and social purposes.

THE HEAVENS

BY RANSOME SUTTON

One year ago, in Harper's for May, 1924, Harlow Shapley, of Harvard Observatory, wrote an article on "The Universe," which was exceedingly interesting and annoying. It could not but annoy those who believe that life is the most important creation. Dr. Shapley began: "From the standpoint of astronomical studies, life is not an important item. It is but one of many crustal phenomena at the surface of a planet. And a planet is a fragment of secondary importance. Animal behavior is a matter compared with the impressive generalizations of physical science."

Perhaps, but impressive generalizations would be impossible without people; there must at least be something to impress. Moreover, human beings do not like to be told they don't amount to much. It is more pleasing to believe the heavens and the earth were created for our benefit—that we are more than flies on one of the millions of spinning wheels in an incomprehensibly complex celestial machine.

Rupert Hughes has called my attention to another article by the same author, in the same magazine for May, 1925, which is in nowise annoying, for it makes no belittling comparisons. I have never read an abler or more understandable story regarding the nature and bigness of our universe. It tells how much and how little astronomers have learned, and we realize that the human mind is becoming a cosmic force of tremendous daring.

Primitive man saw no farther than the horizon, which was round, and he imagined himself standing in the center of the universe. At night everything outside the circle of his campfire light was mysterious. Night noises sounded supernatural.

As man learned more about geography the circle of information widened and the center shifted from time to time, but every tribe and nation occupied, according to its belief, the hub. After awhile, however, man became brainy enough to believe that the earth as a whole (in the words of one of the Wise Men of Greece) "is a flat disk floating on air, around which the stars are fixed like nails in the vault."

We can now comprehend, without headache or brainstorm, that the planets revolve round the sun, and Dr. Shapley says the sun is at least 60,000 light years northward from the center of our universe. As light travels about 6,000,000,000,000 miles a year, this means that the solar system is some 360,000,000,000,000,000 miles off center. The universe as a whole, containing thousands of millions of stars, is shaped like a watch, and it takes about 300,000 years for light to travel from one rim to the other. If you look toward Sagittarius, in what appears to be the southern Milky Way, you are looking toward the center of our galaxy.

Dr. Shapley explains how stellar distances are measured. The method is new, for it was largely devised by himself and Prof. Russell. Not all distances can be measured with equal accuracy, but the new method affords a very simple and accurate means of measuring the mileage between the earth and all the double suns which, as in Argol, revolve around each other. Naturally, two such revolving suns must periodically eclipse each other, and at every eclipse the light of the farther sun is shut off. You first see one star, then the other, and mathematicians know how to calculate the size, motions and orbits of such stars. Moreover, by analyzing the light with a spectroscope and by studying its effect on a photographic plate its degree of brightness can be definitely determined. Then, by comparing its actual brightness with its apparent brightness, or faintness, the distance is determined. The degree of brightness can be gauged as accurately with astronomical instruments as degrees of climate with thermometers.

Besides the doubles, there are "variable stars," whose brightness varies regularly. Like great hearts, they seem to be pulsating. Now Dr. Shapley says: "There is a striking relation between the total light power and the interval of time between successive pulsations of light. . . . If its period is twelve days the brightness exceeds that of the sun two thousandfold. . . . Knowing from its period of variability the actual light power of a star, the measurement of its apparent brightness indicates the distance from the observer."

Some interesting statements are:

Our sun, no doubt, moves in some complicated orbit, though we are yet far from predicting its future path.

A typical globular cluster contains 20,000 or 30,000 stars brighter than the sun.

The 400,000,000 miles covered by the solar system in a year makes the nearer stars appear so shift backward with respect to the faint and distant stars.

Most of the "doubles" are giant stars, with surface temperatures of 10,000 to 20,000 degrees and central temperatures of millions of degrees.

When we study certain of the Cepheids we are photographing and analyzing waves or pulses of light emitted more than 200,000 years ago.

The fact that we can understand such statements shows how much more capable the human mind has become since mankind ceased simply to wonder and began to inquire into the mysteries of nature.

It wasn't selfishness, but a sense of humor, that killed the phrase, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow."

SOCIETY

BY JUANA NEAL LEVY

Brides and brides-elect are vying in the "sweet girl graduate" for hours this month, many affairs planned for them all as well for the returned bridal couples, whom no time was available ere the wedding.

Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Ray L. Logan (Marie Rohrabaugh) were hosts at a charming-ly arranged supper dance at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Gray in Pasadena, the honor guests being Dr. and Mrs. Francis Emmett Browne (Margaret Gray,) and Miss Dorothy Gray and her fiance, Thaddeus Clay Up De Graff, whose wedding is one of the events of next

The spacious gardens of the Gray home in South El Molino avenue were lighted by Japanese and Chinese lanterns, and between dances punch and ices were served there, while the broad terraces and verandas were luxuriously fitted with easy chairs and dancing was enjoyed there. One hundred and twenty-five guests were

Many other affairs are being given in honor of these sisters, among them being the supper dance with which Mr. and Mrs. Walter Louis Corrigan (Georgia Bonesteel) are entertaining at their home in Wilton Place, while Saturday evening Miss Helen Holliday and her brother, Collis Holliday, are giving a dancing party at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burke Holliday in Rosa-mond Court, Pasadena, and Sunday afternoon, the 17th inst., Mrs. Walter Neff is planning a tea at her Pasadena home in honor of the bridal couples, the hours being from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Browne returned from their wedding trip ten days ago and have been the honor guests at numerous affairs since their return. They are domiciled at the William Walden Gray home on Berkeley Square until the return of their parents from the east. Miss Dorothy Gray is awaiting the parents return before setting the date for her wedding with Thaddeus Up De Graff.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Bottle Some

The mother who has several children usually has several washdays a week. A convenient tip for her is to make an abundance of starch on Monday, her real washday, and bottle some while hot for use during the week. It will prove a big time saver and convenience.

Around the Home

The Screen Inventory

Time to get out the screens, see which ones need repairing and replenishing and give the others their yearly coat of paint. Then you are prepared to put up the best fight possible against flies—never letting them get into the house at all.

Save Enough for Patches

When having papering done, it is well to save a part of the roll for emergencies. Frequently we cannot match wall paper and we are very grateful for a piece to cover the spot where the roof unexpectedly made us acquainted with a heavy rain.

The Porch Furniture

Give the porch furniture, if it be of wicker, a good scrubbing with salt water. It will clean it beautifully. If need be, a coat of clear varnish may follow the scrubbing. Then the furniture will look like new.

The Powder Compact

So often the powder compact loses its perfume as time goes on. If you will dampen the puff with your favorite perfume and then return it to the compact you will find it will give renewed scent to it.

Clean Up the Desk

HEADACHES (Part 3)

In one of the most interesting plays I have even seen in New York, most of the characters were represented by mechanical men and women—called Robots—run by delicate clock work, so that they were able to perform all sorts of heavy work.

The Robots were having to be continually replaced because while working around machinery, they would often destroy themselves. As they were very expensive machines, the inventor was working on some device which would cause them to feel pain so that they could know when they were being injured and thus save themselves.

This play made me realize more than ever how useful pain is as a warning that something is wrong. Don't deny the existence of pain! Be as calm about it as you can, for nervousness makes anything worse, but take it as a warning if it persists and find out what all the shootin's about.

As I told you in last week's papers, headaches are warnings, in the vast majority of cases, of some disturbances elsewhere in the body than in the brain. There is some poisoning going on which either irritates the nerves of the head directly, or indirectly by causing a congestion of the blood vessels so that there is a pressure on them.

Briefly, here are the main causes of habitual headaches: eye strain; reflex from abnormal conditions in the intestinal track—chronic appendicitis, chronic constipation, etc.; toxic states accompanying disease, acute or chronic; abnormal conditions in the pelvis—women suffer most from these headaches; nervous headaches due to lowered nerve tone, bad tonsils, decayed teeth, suppurating ears, chronic catarrh with involvement of the nasal sinuses, etc.; overindulgence in tea and coffee, tobacco and other habit forming drugs; habitual overeating or undereating, or unbalanced diet; migraine—possibly hereditary tendency.

Today I want to take up two well-known forms of headache—the bilious headache and migraine.

BILIOUS HEADACHE

The so-called bilious headache is thought to be due to a disturbance of the liver and bile because it is relieved by prolonged vomiting which finally brings up bile. "Bilious headache" is a venerable term, but has no scientific standing. The fact that bile is brought up after prolonged vomiting is no more reason for believing it to be the primary disturbance, than it is to believe that it is the primary disturbance in seasickness, when after prolonged vomiting it comes up. One of my professors used to say that biliousness meant pigishness. It is true that this form of headache often appears after an excess in eating or drinking.

MIGRAINE

By migraine is meant periodic attacks of pain usually on one side of the head, but sometimes on both, often associated with vomiting and followed by sleep. They often occur with such regularity that the patient can predict when they are coming. Some believe that this expectant frame of mind has something to do with bringing them on.

Some of the newer studies of migraine show that in some people this form of headache seems to have some relationship to the protein part of the diet. There is some disturbance of the protein assimilation and just as those who suffer from protein mal-assimilation are subject to asthma, hay fever and hives, so it is found that these migraine sufferers are apt to be also sufferers from these troubles, also. This sensitiveness to certain forms of protein may be inherited. The quickest and best way to find out what proteins are causing the trouble is to begin with a diet as free from protein as possible, especially animal proteins, such as meat, fish, eggs, and milk and then gradually begin to add these foods and build up a suitable diet.

Doris Pawn of Films Sues for Return of Auto

In a claim and delivery suit filed in Superior Court by Miss Pawn, Gibson was asserted to have come in possession of the car May 13, 1924. Miss Pawn said she made demand on Gibson that he return the machine but that he refused to do so and has kept it ever since.

The Russian Art Exhibition, now open to the public at the Art Gallery of the Los Angeles Museum, Exposition Park, is attracting many art students, as well as interested patrons of the fine arts, through it colorful display of the Russian national character depicted on the canvases.

The exhibit is a portion of the collected works of 100 master artists of Russia of the old and new schools, and is sent to Los Angeles under the direction of the Russian Art Societies of Moscow and Leningrad, direct from New York where it has received the acclaim of noted critics in that city.

There are 149 pictures, the most of which depict the various phases of Russian national life. They represent Russian art covering a period of the last twenty-five years. Some of the paintings hint at an oriental style, while others are distinctly European, comparable with those painted by French, German and English artists.

Currencies have now been approximately stabilized in Austria, Czechoslovakia, Esthonia, Finland, Germany, Holland, Jugoslavia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland and Hungary.

There are many hotels whose rates are higher, but few whose service is finer or whose accommodations are better.

SANER TO HEAR ORATORY FINALS

Noted Lawyer to Preside at Collegiate Contest

Will Direct National Event Here June 5, Next

Former American Bar Chief Lauds Movement

Robert E. Lee Saner of Dallas, Tex., former president of the American Bar Association and chairman of the, International Committee for the Codification of International Law, will preside at the grand finals for the National Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest, to be conducted in the Philharmonic Auditorium on June 5, next.

Mr. Saner, in accepting the invitation of the Better America Federation, which is conducting the contest as a citizenship contribution, said that although he is so busy that he would not even consider leaving his office for a brief trip on any ordinary mission, he is, nevertheless, glad to do anything in his power to express his approval and support of the work which the federation is doing through the collegiate contest.

Mr. Saner presided at the final meeting for the first national oratorical contest for high schools in Washington last June and drafted the resolution requesting that the contests be repeated. That resolution was adopted by the American Bar Association's executive committee. As president of the American Bar Association for 1923-24 he showed tremendous interest in the plan for teaching the principles of constitutional government by means of oratorical contests upon a nation-

SANER'S FORECAST

At the close of the high school contest in 1924, Mr. Saner said:

"I predict that the day is not far off when the American people will look upon these contests on the subject of constitutional government as one of the greatest movements of our time. I wish that Los Angeles, as the birthplace of such a movement, could receive the proper credit for what it has contributed. Those with the vision and mental vigor to conceive and execute a work of this character are deserving of the highest praise. Furthermore, I hope that this work which originated in Los Angeles and has been so phenomenally successful in the high schools will be carried into our colleges and universities."

Mr. Saner was chiefly responsible for the joint session in London last July of the American and British bar associations. As a result of that gathering of the best legal minds of the two chief English-speaking races the friendly relationship between the two nations was greatly strengthened and in addition a definite and far-reaching movement for the codification of international law and the raising of that law to new spheres of usefulness and influence was launched. He is regarded, both in this country and abroad, as one of the outstanding American lawyers.

CITIZEN'S DUTY

In spite of the heavy demand upon his time and energies because of a large law practice, he has consistently held to and acted upon an opinion formed when he first graduated from college—namely, that every citizen owes it to the State to give generously of his time and influence, as well as his money, to those causes which are bound up with the great and unending business of sound government.

It is this condition which has led him to devote much of his time to some of the most important developments of the day, not only within the legal fraternity, but in the broader field of public affairs, including higher education. He has represented the University of Texas in litigation on the queston of landed endowments and the policies which he outlined and successfully championed in that connection have profoundly affected the course of American education.

Not unmindful of the importance of those intimate and lasting associations which are formed in college, he served for twelve years as worthy high chancellor of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, and, at great sacrifice of his time and energy, formulated and actualized policies as to interfraternity relationships, which have had far-reaching results.

Mr. Saner will reach Los Angeles on the afternoon of June 4, next, and will remain in this city for the banquet in honor of the chairman and the national collegiate finalists, which will be given by the Better America Federation of California on the night after the contest.

FINANCE COMMITTEE MEETING IS TODAY

At the meeting this afternoon of the city's Finance Committee it is expected that a date will be set for the first session of the Budget Committee. This will probably take place early in the week. The committee has before it the necessity of paring departmental estimates of $26,938,439 for the ensuing fiscal year to keep within the estimated city revenue of $20,000,000.

DRAIN'S MOUTH END DONE

The mainline and two laterals at the mouth end of the $3,000,000 Main-street storm drain have been completed and the entire drain will have been completed by December 1, next, City Storm Drain Engineer J. G. Chesley, who designed the immense project, stated yesterday.

COURT TO MEASURE GRIEF

Film Star in Cross Complaint Charges His Wife Kept Picture of Another Actor on Piano

Just how much mental anguish it causes one picture star to see another star's photograph on his wife's piano is one of the questions that Judge Stephens of the Superior Court is scheduled to take into consideration this week, when he will hear the trial of the divorce litigation between James Cullen Landis and his wife, Mignon Le Brun Landis.

Trial of the suit, which has been hanging fire for months, being postponed from one date to another for various reasons, is on Judge Stephens's calendar for today, and Isador Morris, counsel for Landis, said yesterday that it was really and truly going to be heard this time.

"No more postponements will be asked by either side—unless someone changes his mind," Attorney Morris declared.

Mrs. Landis started the action with a suit for separate maintenance, charging cruelty, one of the items of her complaint being that Landis failed to give her a proper proportion of the $1000 he draws weekly for his work before the lens.

In a cross-complaint for divorce Landis retorted that his wife practiced whatever cruelty prevailed in their menage—that she tortured him by posting in a conspicuous place, on the tpo of the costly grand piano, a picture of one of his hated rivals and esteemed contemporaries of the film world. This, according to Mrs. Landis, in an answer to the cross-complaint, was but a jolly little joke on her part, but Landis maintained that to a man of his temperament and profession such an act was a cruel cut on a tender spot.

SUBTROPICAL CLASS INTERESTS STUDENTS

MANY INQUIRIES RECEIVED ON SUMMER SESSION IN HORTICULTURE

That students in Eastern States are anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity to study subtropical horticulture in California where this field has reached its highest development is indicated by the inquiries concerning the 1925 summer session in subtropical horticulture to be held at Riverside received during recent weeks by the dean of the College of Agriculture. To date requests for information concerning this activity have been received from Florida, New York, Arizona, and several of the Middle Western States.

It is believed that there will be a substantial enrollment of students from eastern institutions as the summer session affords an opportunity for these students to combine a vacation trip to California with an intensive university training in a field of wor kfor which California is famous. In the 1924 session there were enrolled five students from Texas, three from Arizona and several from foreign countries.

STAGES PLAN FARE CUT

Permit for Round-trip Reduction to Imperial Valley Sought

Popularity of auto stage trips from Los Angeles through the Imperial Valley has resulted in an application being filed with the State Railroad Commission to establish an excursion round-trip fare over the lines of the Motor Transit Company, United Stages and Pickwick Stages.

The application was filed by Lewis A. Monroe, joint agent for the three companies. He proposes to put into effect, a $14.50 fare good for sixty days from Los Angeles and return either by way of San Diego or Banning. At present separate fares over the three lines total $16. The agent declares that an increasing demand for the combined service prompted the application.

COLLEGE TO GIVE COURSE ON THEATER

Berkeley Lecturer Will Head Summer Study of Play Production

Each year the State university invites to its summer session at the Southern Branch a number of professors from other American universities, who have made definite contributions to the field of study in which they are interested.

Irving Pichel of Berkeley at present lecturer in English at Mills College, who will be here this summer, has devoted his energies since he was a student at Harvard to play production and the Little Theater movement. Mr. Pichel first developed an interest in acting producing when he was a student in "Forty-seven Workshop" of George Pierce Baker, the class in Harvard from which come so many who are doing notable work with the theater at the present time.

After leaving college, Mr. Pichel sepent a number of years in various Little Theater enterprises, such as the Toy Theater in Boston and other groups in St. Louis, Detroit and Omaha. In 1920 he came to California to give work in play production at the summer quarter at Stanford University. It was at this time that Samuel J. Hume, the director of the Greek Theater of the University of California offered Mr. Pichel an opportunity to become associated in the production of the Wheeler Hall plays in Berkeley. Mr. Pichel was co-director with Mr. Hume in this enterprise for two and one-half years. He then founded his own playhouse in Berkeley, and has been producing there in the winter and spring. Mr. Pichel is also a member of the advisory board of the New York Theater Guild.

During the summer session, Mr. Pichel will conduct two courses, one in play production and one on the social function of the theater. Students in the play-production course will be given opportunity to study the play with regard to setting, lighting, costuming, stage movement and the conduct of rehearsals. A general outline of the technique required in preparing plays for public presentation will be given. In the other course Mr. Pichel will give an historical survey of the theater as a social institution.

Health Officers Set Inspection Record in April

Under the recently created district health inspection plan the City Health Department announces that during April a new high total of 12,679 individual inspections were made, resulting in approximately 3090 health improvements and in the abatement of a similar number of nuisances.

According to the report which Health Commissioner Parrish gave out Saturday, dwellings, restaurants and barber shops were given considerable attention during the month. The improvements effected included the establishment of 147 fire-escape exits and the erection of a total of 514 screens. Rubbish and garbage nuisances were the chief objections found. Four convictions in Police Court were obtained during the month for health violations.

REPAIRS TO BRIDGES UP TO COUNCIL

Proposed Work on Eight Structures May be Put Up to Voters in June

A second appeal for the repairing of eight existing bridges, by means of the proposed bond issue for the June 2 election, in place of three new structures, as proposed by the Council Civic Projects Committee, was made to the Council last week by the City Engineer, and will be considered today.

The list of bridges, with the year built and the estimated cost of repairs, is as follows: Chatsworth street, across San Fernando Creek, 1911, $25,000; Devonshire street, 1911, $15,000; Griffin avenue, 1907, $20,000; Hollenbeck Park, 1898, $102,000; Lake Shore and Sunset Boulevard, 1904, $45,000; Marengo street, 1907, $75,000; Sherman Way at Tujunga Wash, $150,000, and Soto street, 1909, $98,000. The total is $530,000.

City Engineer Van Norman stated that all these bridges are of timber construction and are carrying loads greatly in excess of their design.

The Board of Public Works, submitting the report, asked that the Council place the matter of repairing these old bridges on the June 2 ballot in place of the proposal to build three new bridges.

Woollacott to Appear Today in Stock Deal

A. H. Woollacott, bond and stock broker, today will appear before Justice Ballard to answer charges brought against him by a client of accepting money for purchases and investments without following instructions as to the use of the money.

In the complaint preferred against Woollacott a month ago by the District Attorney's office, the broker is charged with the embezzlement of approximately $11,000 from S. M. Bonsall, a client. According to the latter's story, he gave Woollacott the money in several payments for speculation and investment on the market. He offered proof that the broker instead of using his money for investment for the client had pocketed it.

The broker has asked previously two continuances when the case was called for preliminary hearing to produce proof that the money had been legitimately used. It is expected the hearing will proceed today.

MAY END WATER SERVICE

Attanasio Conte, operating a water system in a portion of Lankershim, has applied to the State Railroad Commission for authority to abandon the service, due to competition of the municipal water in the district. Conte states in his application that city mains have been laid parallel to his system and he is unable to operate without considerable financial loss.

...GINEERING - THE ART OF ORGANIZING AND DIRECTING MEN AND OF CONTROLLING THE FORCES AND MATERIALS OF NATURE FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE HUMAN RACE

Fidelity to Principle

"There can be no true progress without principle."

(From the book "Standards of Business" by Elwood E. Rice)

GREAT engineering and scientific achievement in the service of mankind is possible only through careful regard for Nature's immutable laws, such as the law of gravity or of chemical affinity.

All worthy commercial attainment also is based upon adherence to unchanging laws—the laws of right conduct and good business principle. Every manufacturer whose products enjoy public confidence has gained that distinction through fidelity to principle.

Lasting business success comes not by chance; it is earned by devotion to an ideal and fidelity to principle. This great truth should be realized by all who desire their purchases to bring returns in the form of Service and Satisfaction.

Manufacturers who have built success through years of fidelity to principle are accepted into membership in the Rice Leaders of the World Association because their established character and reputation have been found to square with the Association's Qualifications for Membership:

QUALITY:	An honest product, of quality truthfully represented.
STRENGTH:	A responsible and substantial financial standing.

The Emblem of Business Character of the Rice Leaders of the World Association portrays the above Qualifications in word and symbol. Without reflecting upon other reputable concerns, it is used by member manufacturers on their letter paper, salesmen's cards and products; it is included in their catalogs, literature and advertisements.

Whenever seen in connection with a manufacturer's name, product or policy, the Association Emblem gives dependable evidence of fidelity to principle. It enables you more easily to identify concerns worthy of your respect and confidence. Therefore let this Emblem of Business Character aid you, in selecting your sources of supply and in making your purchases.

Egyptian Boat 3500 Years Old, found in a tomb near Memphis, Egypt, is shown above as it was brought, practically unharmed by the centuries of incarceration, into the light. The boat, a six-oared barge, is now in a Newark, N. J. museum. (P. & A. photo.)

FIR NAMED FOR HIM
David Douglas Called Attention to Trees 100 Years Ago

The Douglas fir is just a century old, as such. Of course, these giants of the British Columbia forests are much older than that in themselves, but up to April 7, 1825, they were just "firs."

On that day David Douglas was surveying the Oregon boundary on behalf of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, and his vessel, the William and Ann, was traveling up north along the coast, arriving off the mouth of the Columbia River. Douglas thereupon made the following entry in his diary:

That is the first item in botanical records of the Douglas fir. Douglas was the first person to separate it from the other firs and the species was, therefore, named for him.

Douglas was highly impressed by the virtues of the Douglas fir. He measured specimens forty-eight feet in circumference and 227 feet high. He states in his journal that "the wood is straight and regular in grain, fine, heavy, easily split and useful for a variety of purposes." He would undoubtedly be surprised were he permitted to return to see the volume of commerce built upon and the great numbers of people supported by the tree which he discovered near Astoria 100 years ago.—[Toronto Globe.

Poor Boys Win Success

Joseph Wilshire, who twenty-seven years ago took a $7-a-week job with the late Julius Fleischmann, yeast king, has been made president of the Fleischmann yeast company, a $100,000,000 corporation. And Wilshire is only 44, too!

Thirty-five years ago Saul Singer came to this country as an immigrant. Now he is vice-president of the Bank of the United States of New York City.

Joseph Gilbert, New York architect, who has just built his eighteenth skyscraper, started his career in a telegraph office at $7 a week.

During the war Harry Sturgis found a "buddy" in W. V. C. Ruxton. The latter was instrumental in getting Sturgis a job. Now, at the age of 31, Sturgis has been elected a director of the Erie Railroad.—[Pathfinder.

HOME DECLARED IN PERIL IN THIS APARTMENT AGE

Rev. G. Palmer Sounds Warning; Lauds Mothers in Radio Sermon From "The Times" Station

"We live in an apartment-house age, when children and dogs are classed together—with the dogs getting a little the better of it," declared Rev. Gordon Palmer, pastor of the South Park Baptist Church, in his sermon yesterday to the KHJ audience from The Times broadcasting station.

In striking contrast to his criticism of the weak spots in our modern social system and his censure of fathers who neglect their children, was Dr. Palmer's eloquent tribute to the mothers of America. Preaching on the subject, "The Queen of the Earth," Mr. Palmer spoke in part as follows:

"Motherhood has been exalted by statesmen, honored by poets, immortalized by art and glorified by the Bible. In the world's great 'Hall of Fame' are thousands of tributes to the mothers of men, but none more touchingly beautiful can be found than those in the Word of God. From first to last it contains the unfolding of woman's glory, marred only by an occasional incident of fearful degeneration.

"There is Jochebed, the resourceful mother of Moses; Hannah, the consecrated mother of Samuel; Deborah, the courageous mother in Israel; Miriam, the inspiration of woman, and Ruth, the queen of the harvest field—the example of pure love in the midst of a sinful and adulterous generation. But in the New Testament woman comes to her highest dignity as the mother of the world's Savior.

JESUS'S TRIBUTE

"Jesus Christ constantly paid tribute to womanhood. For her He broke the seal of death that held the brother of His Bethany friends. For her He revealed His Messiahship. For her He stopped the funeral procession at Nain and gave back the mother's only son. For her He willingly received the criticisms and condemnation of the hypocrites of His day; He reached out His hand to lift her up when the Pharisees would push her down. He was always solicitous of her welfare. He gave consolation in her sorrows, relief from her sufferings and pardon for her sins. The Master never forgot His mother. Even when His heart was breaking on Calvary He thought of her and bade John take her to his own home. Jesus Christ is woman's greatest friend.

"Of all the factors that make men, the godly mother is the most potent. Fathers often get much credit that truly belongs to mother. Many fathers lack interest and have such a lamentable negligence in the training of their children that when they introduce one of these children they should say, 'Sir, I am happy and proud to introduce to you my wife's son.'

HOME PERILED

"Children need the influence of both parents. Our industrial system has imperiled the home. We live in an apartment-house age—an age when children and dogs are classed together. And the dogs have the better time. The hearth which is the heart of the home is almost gone. Home has become a house unoccupied until night comes and then it becomes sleeping quarters, that's all. It takes a heap of living in a house to make it home. Responsibility has been shifted. Mother bears a double share. She often has little help or encouragement. Men become so busy making a living that they neglect to build the lives of their children. A neglectful father will make a careless son. The father is the boy's ideal, his hero. Whatever the father does the boy will want to experiment with, also. Fathers must bear their share of responsibility in the home.

"Generations ago the father kept the altars of prayer, instruction, authority, reverence and religion burning. Today mother has to do it. What religion there is in the home the father has left to the mother 'to have and to hold.' Fathers have forsaken the altars. It is not right nor just. Yet mother has wondrously arisen to the occasion. She has become the high priestess of the home. She keeps the altar fires alive. She must not lower her ideals. She must not quit. America, like civilization, does not rise higher than the ideals of its mothers. A true mother is the most God-like thing alive.

MOTHER DEEDS

"Heaven and earth meet at mother's knees. She went into the Valley of the Shadow to make you an 'heir of all the ages.' She tended your little hurts more skillfully than a physician. She smoothed your fevered pillow and watched the feverish hours slip away till danger passed. Her ears were ever open to your cries and her lips like magic kissed away the pain. Her gentle touch was more soothing than warm poultice and more healing than apothecary's balm. She is ever ready to comfort and cheer when others discourage and criticise. She stands true when all others prove false. Her faith knows no mountains too high, depths too deep, chasms too wide nor obstacles too great to overcome. She remembers the good and forgets the bad. For her sacrifice is joy and work a blessing.

"She suffers most and complains least. She is never gladdened when others go wrong. She is always eager to believe the best. She wrongs no one yet is often most wronged. She freely forgives yet is constantly sinned against. Mother prays without ceasing and hopes without doubting. She serves and does not tire of serving. She loves and never grows weary of loving. She is the greatest channel of blessing God has given to this old world since Jesus came."

POWER OF UNSEEN LIFE TOLD BY RABBI

Rabbi E. F. Magnin spoke at the Temple B'nai B'rith Friday on "The Glory and Power of the Unseen." He said in part:

"Abraham must have had a difficult time convincing people of the reality of a Deity that could not be picturized on stone or carved out of wood. The moon goddess and her husband were easier to comprehend. Moses, although he taught his people this same doctrine and forbade the manufacture of images in the second commandment, had only to turn his back for a few days when the people, under his very brother, were dancing around a calf of gold.

"And so it is difficult for church and synagogue in any generation to convince people that the unseen is more real than the seen, that the life beyond is more real than this life, that running through and ever and above matter and its manifestations is the spirit, that intangible, undefined something which can neither be weighed nor measured but which is felt in the human heart, and grasped by our intuitions in our finer moments. But it is the prime function of religious institutions to teach this very thing and the duty of religious leaders to live by this principle.

"In proportion as church and synagogue proclaim this doctrine will they exercise a real power for good over the souls of men and women. If ever church and synagogue were needed by the world it is today. Ours is the greatest opportunity in the world, for, despite the materialism rampant in every phase of life, people are groping for something, hoping for something, praying for something real. I feel that the Jewish people, descended from prophets and makers of the Bible, should be in the very vanguard of the army of the Lord, true to its mission, true to its martyrs, disciples of Father Abraham who broke down the images and false gods of his day and blessed the world with the knowledge of the one and only God, the unseen Creator of worlds upon worlds, the Father of mankind and of all things that breathe and move under the starry hosts of the heavens."

DOING NOTHING HELD DEADLIEST OF SINS

"The sin of doing nothing is the deadliest of the seven deadly sins," declared Dr. C. F. Aked, associate pastor of the Wilshire Boulevard Congregational Church, in a sermon preached yesterday at the Forum Theater. Dr. Aked said in part:

"It is the stupid thoughtlessness of life which brings such pain. Why do we hurt one another as we do? Not because we want to hurt. Not because we hate one another. Cases of deliberate cruelty are rare.

"There are perversions of our nature in which the perpetration of cruelty brings actual pleasure. There are no depths to which humanity, once given over to the service of the flesh, may not sink. But in these cases the pain is inflicted for the sake of the pleasure which it brings, not for the sake of the pain which it causes to another. Jealously and revenge stir men to deeds of violence, in which they inflict pain, and long to inflict it, and love to do it.

"I am not denying that anybody ever hurts anybody else because he wishes to hurt him. That would be absurd. I am affirming that these cases are relatively infrequent. They are few and far between, as compared with the 10,000 times 10,000 instances in which we cause each other pain out of sheer carelessness, folly and stupidity."

SUPREME TREASURE OF WORLD DESCRIBED

"Your Mother and Mine," was the subject of a sermon preached yesterday by Rev. F. E. Hagin at the Figueroa Boulevard Christian Church. Mr. Hagin said in part:

"There is a tenderness, a pathos, a constancy and a warmth about mother love which is unexcelled. John, who was at the crucifixion of Jesus, says as an eye witness: 'But there was standing by the cross of Jesus, His mother.'

"The story is told that once upon a time a mighty angel, fair and glorious, left the courts of heaven to visit the lights and shades of God's footstool. He was charmed and interested by the various things he saw, heard and experienced. He decided to take with him some mementoes of his journey, and he gathered a bouquet of beautiful flowers. He next gathered the smile of a child and, lastly, he stereotyped a vision of mother love. Before completing his long journey to the pearly gates, he decided to glance over and arrange his souvenirs, when, lo! the flowers had faded, the child's smile had turned to a frown, but there was mother love, as exquisite and beautiful as ever. And this he carried into the courts of heaven and showed it to the admiring angels."

HOME "INVESTIGATION" NEEDED, PASTOR SAYS

Rev. W. P. Isett, pastor of Amanda Chapel, preached yesterday on "Interior Decorating." He said in part:

"The unselfish sacrifice and persistent love of a mother for her child continually attracts the admiration of the world. There is nothing in human knowledge which so illustrates the character of God as the relationship existing between a mother and her child. It is for that reason Christianity has set aside one Sunday in the year when we shall pay tribute to this mighty power in society.

"Without any thought of credit due, or merit won, mothers everywhere are heroically facing their opportunity to shape the destiny of the world. Ignore it as we may; give credit to education, to the influence of the church, to environment, to social enlightenment, to science, or what we will, the fact remains that the greatest influence for good, the strongest restraint against evil, is motherhood. The noblest monument which can be reared to woman is the living monument of a noble son or daughter. Through many generations it will endure when chiseled stone has crumbled to dust.

"Economic science has not kept pace with medical science or business efficiency. Year by year we are making it harder for mothers to fulfill their mission. Let us bring the work of raising children at least to the level of the work of earning a salary. If motherhood is the greatest business in the world, surely the business office, with its abundance of helpers, up-to-date equipment and regular hours, is a sad commentary on our lack of truthfulness. Of all modern movements with which our busy brains are filled, I should like to foster a back-to-the-home movement, when we should give at least as much attention and thought to equipping our homes for the big profits of family life as we do to our offices and public enterprises for the profits of business. The 'investigation' most needed is that which will see if our homes are functioning to their fullest capacity, with the utmost efficiency, and to the greatest profit to society."

TELLS WHY MOTHERS DESERVE REVERENCE

Dr. Bruce Brown of the South Park Christian Church preached yesterday on "Behold Thy Mother." He said in part:

"The mother is the first to think of the child for she is the first one to know that it is to be born. The child is a part of her as of no one else. Its body is derived from her and sustained by her. The mother deserves more consideration than the father from the child for she has made the greater sacrifice for it. The last thought in the mother's mind when husband and parents have passed from memory is of the child. The measure of civilization is the place that is accorded to mothers in a nation's life.

COAST FACING RUM INVASION

Dry Armada Driving Liquor West, Officials Say

Government Ship Mistaken for Booze Runner

Federal Officers Will Plan Wet Blockade

Warned that rum-runners who are finding the Federal dry armada along the Atlantic Coast "too hot for comfort" are preparing to transfer their operations on a large scale to the Pacific, local Federal agents gave voice to the opinion last night that some vessels of the "invading liquor squadron" already have arrived in Southern California waters.

The opinion is based largely upon an incident which occurred off Tanner's Bank a few nights ago, considered more or less humorous at the time.

The Guide, a government vessel engaged in coastal and geodetic surveying, was cruising about off the bank measuring shoals, when a speedboat appeared out of the mists, flashing what appeared to be code signals.

BOAT SPEEDS AWAY

According to Lieutenant-Commander T. J. Morrow of the Guide, the unidentified speedboat came close in and hailed. The hail was answered and a voice shouted:

"I came after orders No. 13, 14 and 15!"

The speedboat quickly put about, Commander Morrow said, and hid its lights as it proceeded toward shore.

The confusion of the speedboat, in the opinion of Division Prohibition Chief W. W. Anderson, United States Attorney McNabb, and other Federal officials here may be ascribed to two causes, the first an overabundance of rum-runners off Los Angeles Harbor, and the second the possible arrival of eastern rum ships, who are being driven from Atlantic waters by the relentless warfare being waged against them by government patrols.

PLAN CAMPAIGN

Commander Morrow of the Guide is authority for the statement that there are at least five large and apparently well-equipped vessels off San Clemente Island at the present time, all of which are engaged in illicit liquor traffic. To date, their actions have kept them immune from Federal interference.

Confronted with the undeniable evidence that these and other ships are preparing to deliver a veritable avalanche of liquor along Southern California shores and forewarned of the invasion which may be expected from the East, municipal, county and Federal officers are expected to confer this week to discuss and put into operation means to combat the liquor offensive.

FUGITIVE KILLED BY OFFICER

Negro Shot After Chase Through Traffic as He Flees From Arrest in Auto

While fleeing arrest in an automobile, Christopher Malcolm, 32 years of age, a negro employee of the city sanitary department, was shot and killed last night by Police Officer E. E. Jones of University Division.

Officer Jones was called to a house at 3631 Trinity street, where a disturbance had been reported, when he met Malcolm coming out of the house. Seeing that Malcolm was armed, Officer Jones took his gun and ordered him under arrest. The negro broke away and jumped into an automobile and drove away.

Officer Jones followed in a police machine. After a chase of seven or eight blocks through traffic, the policeman drove alongside of the negro's car and shouted at him to halt. When Malcolm failed to do so, Officer Jones fired several shots in the air and then one at Malcolm that struck him in the neck, killing him almost instantly. Malcolm was dead when he was examined at the Receiving Hospital.

Detectives Stevens and Thompson investigated and it was stated Jones probably will be exonerated. Police records show, it was declared, that the dead man had previously been arrested for burglary in Arizona.

KIDNAPING IS NEW RESORT OF BANDITS

Salesman States He Was Forced Into Car, Carried Several Miles, Robbed

G. C. Nelson, a salesman residing at 1027 Lincoln street, was kidnaped early yesterday morning by two bandits who drove him several miles before giving him freedom, according to Nelson's report to police.

Nelson was accosted by the two men at Pico and Figueroa streets and forced into an automobile at the point of revolvers. During the ride he was robbed of $15 in cash and a $150 diamond ring. He was ordered out of the automobile on Pico Boulevard about a mile west of Western avenue.

Descriptions of the men given police tally with those given by other pedestrians who were robbed Saturday night, and early yesterday morning.

Canadians Will Open New Hall Tuesday Night

The recently completed Maple Leaf Auditorium at 1137 South Hope street, erected by the Canadian Maple Leaf Club, will be formally opened Tuesday evening with a grand ball at which all members of the club are expected to be present.

Charles Howard Shaver

The new building is one of the most beautiful of its kind on the Coast. The first floor has a large lobby, office, soda fountain and a large ballroom. The second floor is surrounded by a large balcony which can be used for card parties, banquets and other similar purposes. The women's parlors are also located on this floor. Smoking and reading rooms for men are located in the basement.

Two Injured, One Seriously, in Auto Crash

Two persons were injured, one probably fatally, early yesterday, when an automobile roadster, driven by James W. Barr of 3842 South Hope street was struck by a large sedan driven by Luigi Morena of 210 East Eleventh street. The accident occurred at the intersection of Sixteenth and Figueroa streets. Both victims were occupants of Barr's car.

Of the two injured men, H. R. Kelley of 607 West Seventh street, was the most seriously hurt, suffering internal injuries. His companion, George Aldridge, 7156 Keystone avenue, Culver City, probably also was injured internally.

According to the University police, who investigated the accident, Morena's car was traveling at a high rate of speed when it rammed the lighter machine, overturning it on the highway. The driver of the latter car escaped with a few scratches.

CLEANER'S GASOLINE WITHOUT ACID TRACE

J. C. Solomon, proprietor of the Consolidated Cleaners and Dyers, Inc., 1800 Temple street, yesterday reported an analysis of the gasoline in the cleaning tank at his establishment showed no trace of acid. W. J. McColgan, nightwatchman, told police Friday night he had seen some one run away from the tank and had found its top removed. Solomon said he is not taking sides in the cleaners' war that has resulted in bombings and property damage.

It is computed that if Australia could be placed in the Atlantic Ocean it would just about fill the space between America and the British Isles.

The Woman and Her Job

By Mary Margaret McBride

(Questions concerning the problems of women will be answered in this column if addressed to Mrs. Waltrous at The Times.)

AND ONE WAS DUMB. . . .

"They didn't pay much attention to education when I was young," said Jane the other day as we sat together at the National Child Health Week celebration, "that is, unless you were really smart. I was awfully dumb."

Jane laughed comfortably, the blue eyes back of thick eye-glasses were twinkling happily, little creases hurried out from their corners, but not to stay. Her cheeks are too round and plump to hold wrinkles. She says she's 52, but she'd pass anywhere for 10 years less.

"I just couldn't get on at school . . . I couldn't see! But nobody found out I was near-sighted till I was twelve.

My sisters were so smart, my poor mother thought I was just stupid.

"They got me eye-glasses and I learned to sew . . . surprisingly well, too. From the day I got those glasses I found I had a trick of putting clothes together. I had that something we call style.

"I'm always amused by the thought of those first years. Poor me, I was so dumb!" And again Jane chuckled.

I know a great deal about Jane. I know that she retired several years ago on a comfortable fortune made from the operation of a factory in New York.

But between waits in the program Jane told me how she rose from the "family dumb-bell" to the exclusive little shop on Fifth Avenue, over which she presided as Madame Jacques, the Parisian modiste, with the best of Westchester for patrons.

At the age of twelve she couldn't read or write. Still believing her "dumb," as she calls it, they wouldn't think of sending her to school; she was too old.

Two years of making frocks for her "smart" sisters, then she went into a factory. Four grinding years, and at eighteen she became forewoman where for another two years she developed executive ability.

At twenty she created a new idea in clothes and opened a factory of her own with two helpers.

"Many days I was in the shop at 6 and never left it till 12 at night. At first I sold my line myself, then I was able to borrow some money and enlarged a bit. At twenty-five I'd established credit, and started out on a bigger scale.

"I went to night school, and studied my head off . . . It's a good thing that near-sightedness is not weakness. I hadn't had a vacation in twelve years, and at 32 I sold out and went to Europe. Most of my two years was spent in Paris and Vienna.

"I learned a lot of things about music and art, but best of all I picked up precious pointers on the making of clothes. It was after that I opened the Fifth Avenue shop. I operated it about ten years, and had money enough to quit for good. That was when I first met you on that Alaska trip . . . do you remember?"

Indeed, yes, but I wanted to know about the "smart" sisters.

Jane chuckled comfortably. "Oh, I sent two of my nephews through college, and started one in the practice of medicine . . . he's done well, too. The other is an engineer in Brazil. After my other sister's husband died I brought her and her daughter to New York, and started her in a boarding-house. We though the girl was going to be musical, but she married a university boy from Kentucky. He inherited a stock farm in the blue-grass, and brought my sister down there. They're happy as ducks."

And this was Jane, the dumb one.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

Dear Mrs. J. G.: I do not approve of exploiting children. However, the least harmful way to is give the little girl a try-out in some of the radio studios. You could bring her to KHJ any afternoon between 2 and 4 o'clock.

Dear Mrs. McC.: Millinery is a seasonal occupation. There are usually several weeks of idleness each year. Many women like this opportunity to rest, and prefer seasonal occupations for that reason. Apprentices start at from $10 to $12 a week. I'd advise a course in evening high school first, or supplement your day work with such training.

ACID BRIDE'S COUNSEL TO ASK RETRIAL

Mrs. Bernice L. Day's New Attorney Will Offer Arguments Today

On the grounds that Mrs. Bernice L. Day was not given a fair and legal trial Attorney John L. Richardson, called into the case after the girl's conviction on an acid-throwing charge, today will argue for a retrial of the case before Judge Hardy. A decision on the motion will probably be returned late in today's session.

Mrs. Day was convicted and her sister, Carolyn Lundstrom, was acquitted by a jury a week ago after a trial lasting several days. Darby Day, Jr., the victim of the acid bath, said Mrs. Day hurled the acid in his face.

Defense attorneys attempted to show that marital difficulties had upset Mrs. Day to a point where she was not responsible. This evidence, however, was not allowed in the presentation of the defense.

Attorney Richardson will argue today that a number of mitigating circumstances that should have gone in the record for his client's case were not allowed and upon that point will ask that his client be given a retrial.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. McCartney will represent the State in opposing the motion.

Suit Threatened if City Improves Beacon Street

A threat to sue the city of Los Angeles for damages in case the improvement of Beacon street, between Santa Cruz street and Fourth street, is ordered, has been made on the City Council by certain indignant property-owners

The Board of Public Works invited bids on the improvement and awarded the contract to C. R. Butterfield, the lowest regular bidder. Then a notice was filed by owners of a majority of the frontage that they elected to do their own work. This was followed by others who threatened the suit against both the city and the contractor, asserting that the improvement would damage contiguous property by disturbing earth on the lots.

The board requested an opinion from the City Attorney, who stated that, in his opinion, the city would be liable for damage. The board then passed the buck to the City Council, which will consider the matter today.

BURGLAR CRITIC

Mrs. Harry Fayne Whitney, the famous sculptor, was talking in her New York studio about a visiting artist whose work had been greatly overpraised.

"The critics," she said, smiling, "haven't as much wisdom as the burglar. A burglar, you know, broke into this man's studio the other night. The room was crowded with his works, huge portraits, landscapes and what-not, but the burglar only took a bottle of beer."—[Exchange.

SCION OF FAMOUS MEN PLANS FILM

Tancred Ibsen

Tancred Ibsen of the Hollywood colony, who finds both good and bad luck in having two such illustrious grandfathers as Henrik Ibsen and Bjornstjerne Bjornson, has announced that he will return shortly to his native Norway to film several Viking scenarios of his own writing amidst ancient Norse scenes. M. B. Dudley is financing the venture and Ibsen intends to take with him a director and three stars from here, ne has announced. He has sold two scenarios to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"There's a paradoxical phase to this illustrious ancestor business," Ibsen said, "I want to carry on for my own sake and for theirs as well, but if I make a name for myself everybody will say it came from my grandfathers and if I don't they'll say that's the way it usually turns out. I envy at times the fellow with nameless grandfathers."

Body of Boy is Washed Ashore Below Fermin

The body of a boy, believed to be that of Harris Harper, 14 years of age, who was washed to sea February 2, last, was found on the rocky shore at Point Fermin yesterday. Positive identification is expected to be made by the boy's parents, who live at 1520 East N street, San Pedro, as soon as the body is recovered from the shallow depth along the shore. The Harper boy was carried to sea by a wave that caught him and a playmate, Jerome Paulson, on a rock. The Paulson boy was rescued by a fishing line cast by Corp. A. L. Burris of Fort MacArthur.
